It's been almost 2 months that I have not received what I paid for. I have messaged almost every single day with excuses every time, he even requested me to send even more money ($150) which I did so he can be able to deliver yet he never delivered.

Only asking for a full refund of the money I paid right now I no longer need anything else.

Share snaps of the conversation where he asks for more money and the txid.

If I were you, I would choose a full refund and nothing else.

Hope this gets resolved.

Seems valid.

User has been removed from Benevolence until payment has been fully refunded.

Best of luck, OP.

HostTeraByte - February 4, 2024, 1:09 am

Will have it fixed soon.

any updates?

Hostterabyte, I noticed you have a fairly expensive service going here:

Nothing, still waiting for a refund. No longer accepting the service as delivery.

Sorry to hear that - I'm sending him a msg now to see what the plan is here. He has other high price services so he really needs to resolve this ASAP in my opinion.

Thank you very much, highly appreciate your input. He can just refund the amounts I sent him to resolve this instantly.

censored out some personal stuff that is unrelated to this dispute.
He claimed he had jaundice, then stopped replying to me.

My last few messages are spread out by days between

I had high hopes that he would resolve this because he did seem like a nice guy, but he has been trying to sell a $600 and $300 service since this dispute so I think he's preparing to exit / is exited.

Suffering from Jaundice? The fuck does that even mean. You don't suffer from Jaundice. You suffer from whatever is causing your Jaundice, which can be treated 99% of the time.

The scammer is now closed.

Artisan - March 2, 2024, 12:46 am

If the disputed member decides to visit us again and sees this:

Instead of whining and bitching, refund this client 100% of the funds you scammed from him. Do that in case of the other dispute you have on you. Then use the contact form to request Omni to unban you.

If you cant do these things, then good riddance.
