Thread: User: Deepweb tried to ransomware me for 5k usd etizolamvendor - February 7, 2024, 11:16 am

He owed me money and we came to a compromise and instead he tried to deploy ransomware that was extremely weak. Heres a photo of us on telegram and he thought he really could ask for 5,000 usd

I would avoid doing anydesk with him or anyone he is associated with

Just letting you know that is a staff member, they will know the reason for the ban.

Damn he's still trying to come back? I wouldn't be surprised if he already did on a multi.

I posted the thread that got him banned for scamming...

if he does check he'll see why that he's a scammer, check my profile if you doubt me he got banned right after i showed he scammed me, so its pretty clear what happened..

@DeepwebHF <-- His telegram

Deepweb likes to contact me on telegram but hes just deleted his profile pic on telegram and has been begging me to talk to staff regarding his ban which i cannot do but i can only tell people to stay away from him because hes up to no good.

Plus he just nuked our entire chat at least i reported this before he nuked our telegram thread.

There was many victims, he had a lot of complaints in his sales threads. He was scamming off-site for years, because a lot of people didn't use HF contracts and middleman.

Thats for sure. He had active multis even when his main account was still up.

For example:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6227855>

Seems like he is struggling to find new victims now, but he will keep trying, thats for sure.

Or He'll Try to sell you Redline for 300 USD.. Yup he does that

OR Unlimited Crypting after the first transaction. Well Good riddance to that garbage.

I find it astonishing that people frequently open unknown files from unknown sources on their PCs.

I understand, but I always urge people to use a VM or similar tools when downloading from unknown sources to protect their PCs.
