Thread: What could do someone if someone would find my passport and bank card?

Hi there,

I lost my bank card and my passport and once. I've locked them via bank.
But if I would have not locked it. What can someone do with my information?

It's not an credit card, its an normal bank card.

Surly to use them online on website that require only visa for registration, or even under debit

Also some site need passport for registration too

Any way good u deleted them

Financial & ID fraud most likely

There's a bunch of things that could happen, but mostly you could lose your bank balance if they decided to spend it. With your passport, you can apply for certain things

Maybe it's proper to secure an affidavit of loss and report to the police so just in case someone use it you got a proof that they were lost and not in your possession.

Financial and Identity Fraud would probably be the two things they would do with it.

Good job locking it with your bank or whatever, because it could've screwed you over if you didn't.

The type of person that could really run amok with those items wouldn't find it or care about it in the first place.
