Hello everyone,

Today i got exepcted to a good engineering school to software engineering.

Still, i'm waiting for an answer to Computer Science major which is my first option but i'm a bit under the requirement.

I was also under the requirement for software engineering, but the professor who manage the engineering school interviewed me himself, and got really exited about my hacking projects.

I am preparing for Computer Science classes, using the class google drive. next month the semester will start and i haven't been practicing mathematics for years.

I hope i wouldn't screw it up, i am preparing for the class all day long every day without even stopping at Saturday and Sunday.

If anyone got advice, i'll be glad to hear

I initially thought you got expelled, not accepted.

Nonetheless congrats on getting accepted.

Hope you will soon discover the difference in 'accepted' and 'exepcted'

Awesome news man, congrats and good luck!

I always found that lecturers/tutors/teachers were more interested in my out-of-school activities and projects than they were about my grades. Out of pure interest, what sort of projects did you show them?

Best of luck for the future!

I don't believe English is his first language.

Congratulations on acceptance, I saw your post last month when you had said you had first applied for some universities. You're one step closer to achieving your dream. Keep it up!
