

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: How to carrier unlock a Samsung Galaxy S23 Ultra?

Kalvaxas - February 22, 2024, 7:01 pm

My Samsung Galaxy S23 Ultra is carrier locked to AT&T on an installment plan. I'm traveling overseas for a few weeks, and I need to buy a SIM to use for this phone, since I'd rather not buy a cheap phone just to use overseas. Paying off the plan wouldn't make sense since I only pay $6 a month for it due to promotional credits. If I pay it off early, that $6 goes up to $40+ a month.

It's the snapdragon model for what it's worth. Not Exynos. I'd even be down to try to social engineer AT&T to unlock it for me, but even with a great prompt to follow, I doubt they'd even consider it.

Any help would be greatly appreciated!

Syndicate - February 22, 2024, 9:48 pm

At least here in Canada, you can go to pretty much any phone store and they have unlocking services. I know for Android it's much more simple than iPhones.

ptolx1 - April 19, 2024, 8:35 am

try to get an esim...it would be easier

BlackPanth3R - June 16, 2024, 7:50 am

(Feb 22, 2024 08:01 PM)Kalvaxas Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) My Samsung Galaxy S23 Ultra is carrier locked to AT&T on an installment plan. I'm traveling overseas for a few weeks, and I need to buy a SIM to use for this phone, since I'd rather not buy a cheap phone just to use overseas. Paying off the plan wouldn't make sense since I only pay $6 a month for it due to promotional credits. If I pay it off early, that $6 goes up to $40+ a month.

It's the snapdragon model for what it's worth. Not Exynos. I'd even be down to try to social engineer AT&T to unlock it for me, but even with a great prompt to follow, I doubt they'd even consider it.

Any help would be greatly appreciated!

I have solution. Done within 30 mins. Can use middleman if you wish