Unfortunately not, I've just started selling the guide.

That's why the price is so low; it means more people can buy the guide and write reviews.

$50 is kind of steep for your target audience, no? With no vouches on the thread it's a lot more of a gamble for someone to drop their last $50 on this, blindly, than to spend $15 on another book and still have $35 for any extra set up costs (or a meal if there are no extra costs involved ?).

You should think about slashing the price for your first 10 sales or so, to $20 or $30. Something more doable for your demographic, instead of the inflated "$50 today but will go up soon" price scheme.

Of course, you can put money into other guides, but we both know that a guide for 15$ is not much to get out of.

I could, of course, set the price at 10-20$, but then I'd be giving this method away and I'm too much behind it for that.

If you want a good method that you can really make money with, you should spend more money, in my opinion. <

When I have found the first buyers, there will be reviews to support the increase in the future.

You're selling something, but in a slightly different way!

prostore - March 2, 2024, 9:08 pm

Any vouchers from people who bought the method?

No, it has absolutely nothing to do with that!
