

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Is there any market for ELF Crypters?

Infinity. - March 6, 2024, 4:09 pm

Hi guys, needed some advice on selling ELF binaries and want to know if there's any market for it here on HF?

Hackers - March 6, 2024, 4:17 pm

(Mar 6, 2024 05:09 PM)Infinity. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hi guys, needed some advice on selling ELF binaries and want to know if there's any market for it here on HF?

I don't know if there is a huge demand, but I think it'll be more popular as certain Linux distros continue to become more popular.

What we really need is a distro to breakaway from the pack and steal a large amount of marketshare.

I did see 1 thread recently on HF about hiding processes (from 'ps aux' or similar) so there's obviously an interest :)

One thing that is a barrier is that when people talk about how popular Linux is, a large amount of that is due to no-gui servers. In those cases a lot of times a trusted PPA is used, or another package manager is. I wonder if the opportunities to actually get someone to download an obscure program are just so limited compared to on Windows. Linux users are, on average, more capable and tech savvy than Windows users, so even the non-server Linux setups are being run by mini sys admins. I'm sure there's a market, but it'll be smaller than a PE crypt. This is changing though!