Thread: March 2024: 14 year old turned \$15k into \$2.9m in 3 weeks

bluewaters - March 16, 2024, 10:27 am

This kid apparently bought a brand new memecoin that came out around 24th february 2024

Details:

twitter.com/CrashiusClay69/status/1764915641356537900

His wallet:

basescan.org/token/0x532f27101965dd16442e59d40670faf5ebb142e4?a=0x55cafc85c68cc2f558fa4da995173ed6cebe213d

$BRETT price:

dex-tools.io/app/en/base/pair-explorer/0xba3f945812a83471d709bce9c3ca699a19fb46f7?t=1710610122711

Coin name is $BRETT. The first memecoin built on Coinbase layer 2 blockchain

Same how Shib is to Doge, Brett is to Pepe

Brett is a blue frog (because Coinbase is blue), Pepe is a green frog

This isnt a shill post. I haven't invested in this shitcoin. I've been speculating it since it was $275m market cap. It jumped to $450m a few hours ago. Seems like the kid made a good call... or... he's the contract deployer, or got some insider info to buy it that early, or got paid by $BRETT to promote it as an influencer...

I asked in their telegram: who would throw $15,000 USD into a brand new unknown memecoin, isnt this a bit odd? and i got banned immediately. Is this a red flag?

What are your thoughts on this shitcoin? would it be a good buy right now? what are the chances for Coinbase to push it to their platform since its the first memecoin on BASE blockchain?

Omniscient - March 16, 2024, 10:36 am

Memecoins are something that smart logical people should avoid. Perfect for a 14 year old with no sense.

Or just incredibly lucky. Don't worry, he'll fuck it all up.

If it's not an inside job and that it was luck, then i totally agree with you, he is likely to burn that cash in no time.

Crazy what kind of money is being made and lost in the crypto space haha

The last sentence is the most important lol. You only see these huge gains that make headlines you dont see the thousands that people lose in these meme coins.

Will be funny when he sells, hits a massive taxable event, finds out he's screwed next year. Smart play would be to convert it all to BTC while it's worth 43 BTC.

Kalvaxas - March 16, 2024, 11:07 am

If a meme coin is making headlines for a massive percentage rise, then chances are that you already are too late if you decide to invest. Kudos to the kid for making bank, but I'd convert that into BTC or ETH for the long haul. Depending on what state he's in, he could have a massive tax rate to that. Whenever he plans to cash out or sell, he should probably move to a state with no tax. Like Florida. All you pay with capital gains in FL is 20% total. Whereas California for example, you're paying like over 50% of that in tax if I'm not mistaken.

he said he won't sell until at least a $10m USD profit. This means $BRETT shitcoin would need to hit about a $2 billion dollar market cap, which isn't too unrealistic considering Pepe hit over a 4 billion dollar market cap? Would be interesting to see how this ends up Moron kid could be set for life with a $3m head start. And yeah, maybe he can get to $20m or $100m. Or go to $100k. I'd at least put $1m into BTC.

ToeCrusher - March 16, 2024, 11:42 am

All he needs to do is to invest 75% of it in BTC, enjoy the remaining 25% and have fun with it

Rahul007rhp - March 17, 2024, 6:23 am

Well i guess he's lucky . My mind doesnt let me invest in those meme coins

Noble - March 18, 2024, 12:52 pm

The kid could put that money to the side until he learns what to do with it, but it will probably be like one of those lottery winners who eventually goes broke because they never came across a lump sum of money like that before and have no idea how to utilize it.

I do not believe it's wise to go for such a high investment in a risky asset, something like 50% real estate/commodities/etfs would make more sense, then 25% in high risk assets and 25% to enjoy life and self develop.

It's $300k now and he's still holding the bag.

nvm wrong Brett

Noble - March 19, 2024, 4:34 pm

We don't know if he's 14 years old, could be a grown man who works with financial firms who has a huge following trying to get people into meme coins and just pump and dump things. I don't know how the SEC handles things in the crypto world, but this seems like a pump and dump scheme. Having the confidence to throw 15k into a meme coin and generate that amount of profit, and say their holding until it hits billions (Most likely he sold because profit is profit) sounds like a scheme to get people to buy while he's selling his shares, that's why the price dropped, lol.

How did you calculate this?

The wallet has 72,068,663.372164040315129373 BRETT, and according to the converter on <https://dexscreener.com/base/0x404e927b203375779a6abd52a2049ce0adf6609b>
It's still about USD$1,899,009.27

I'm still following this shitcoin. I even bought into the hype and actually made a decent profit (few hundreds of USD). But certainly wont hold for long term, its just a short term dickriding hype-driven wave until the dumping starts. The kid still holds all 72m coins, currently worth about USD $3,503,000 and he just bought USD $100,000 more. This shitcoin seems to be mooning every day more and more. Insane

For every 14 year old that spends $15,000 (of I'm assuming his parents' money), there is another one losing it all...

I hate the "made a very stupid investment and got rich" stories because it's cherrypicking the rarest win out of a sea of losses usually.

there are rumors that he got those 15k from selling other memecoins, and now hes just reinvesting it into more memecoins. Not sure if i should believe that bullshit story since it's most likely daddy's money, but in the world of crypto and memecoins nothing would surprise me anymore...

I believe it. Parents don't give 15 year olds $15k to invest in meme coins. I wouldn't doubt the kid started with $50. There is always that one person who excels. He might spend all his time on it, have the right connections, and basically immerses himself in the meme coin environment. Dedication and hard work is how you win. I believe that more than he just got lucky. For all we know, the kid has been doing this crap since he was 10.

True. But today he bought additional +100,000 USDT of $BRETT shitcoin
<https://twitter.com/CrashiusClay69/status/1772348035822936445>

And here he bought $KAS for +665,000 USDT
Then bought additional $DOGE for +551,000 USDT

Worst thing is it's not fake, it can be verified on blockchain and he transparently shares his wallet address so we can verify that he's not lying anything

How does a 14 year old have over $1 million USDT liquid + $3.5 million USDT on paper?
something feels off here.. if he got $15k from selling memecoins how did he possibly reach the multi-million dollar levels at just 14 years old?

Not saying it's legit, just saying it could be. I don't really give a fuck about the success stories of other people. I'm not jealous because someone did something I either chose not to do, or simply can't do. Good for them. I hope the kid makes $100m and a bunch of followers drool over him every day.

Meh, maybe the kid is a genius with a very high IQ?

Also, is everyone sure this is a real 14yr old? Looking at their Twitter account it seems way too mature to be a 14 year old. If I were to guess, it's a Brett dev shilling.

He has a youtube channel and posts trading videos with his voice, also on X. The voice really does sound like some teenage kid who hasn't hit puberty yet. Either this is an AI voiceover or really a 14 year old. But then he also did live twitter spaces and talked with other shillers/influencers on X and had the same voice.. so it's not AI.. it's either a voicechanger, or.. his real voice and he's really a teenage kid any idea if he is swapping addresses a lot? Have to wonder if he's using peoples' addresses and claiming they're his for clout. Doubtful if you're so confident, but it would be strange to have a 14 year old with $15k, or $100k purchases. The fact he's sitting on $2-4 million potentially and hasn't sold is suspicious, but it's also what I would expect out of a 14 year old so idk.

Could it be possible that he's networking together in a private secret telegram group with about 25 influencers, or perhaps all 266 of those holders are influencers, who created and bought that shitcoin first, and now setting up strategy in the group on how to shill it to others so they can use others as exit liquidity? This would make them devious and deceptive

But even if this is the case, they (or he) really does put thousands and hundreds of thousands of USD into these shitcoins, so he's risking of losing it all--would scammers do this just to look legit and authentic but their main goal is to rug even more, or am i overthinking now?

hard to say, but it definitely suggests he knows more about BRETT than he's letting on imo. Maybe those are related staking pools or some sort of liquidity, I don't know... but 266-269 holders on two related coins at exactly 150,000 tokens each for this guy screams suspicious to me.
