Thread: What was the best year of your life? The worst?

Eran - April 2, 2024, 3:36 am

The best year of my life was definitely 2017 while the worst being 2023.

2024 looking hopeful so far but let's not get ahead of ourselves ?

What about you?

Bastille - April 2, 2024, 3:48 am

I hope 2024 to be my best year, I left the company I worked for 5 years, should be officially working in cybersecurity this year, however I encountered some health issues because of working and studying too much, currently resting, hope this will be fixed soon

I don't know when my worst year was tho, because for every year I'm thinking about, even when bad things happened they helped me to become a better version of myself, 2023 was really rough but if didn't happen I wouldn't be where I am now, so ...

Leaving a company of 5 years sounds like quite the move! I hope you recover ASAP and crush your goals this year!

I feel your last sentence. 2023 was pretty rough on me but I've had some very valuable lessons.

2022 was the best year I've had. (my kid was born)
2015 is the worst year I've had. (my best friend of 25 years killed himself)

I wouldn't say I've moved on, but I've become used to it. Life sucks sometimes, the older I get the more I understand and have accepted it.

Best was may be 2012, worst would be 2023

After first reading the question, no specific year honestly comes to mind for either my best or my worst. That isn't to say I couldn't sit down, really think about it, and maybe come to a conclusion on at least one of them though I guess. I'm sure I could.

This seems fair. Some come across pretty normal for the most part or what I consider to be normal anyway lol. Some be getting kinda wild I think though ?

Not sure about "best", but the funnest year of my life was at 17 years old, drugs were new to me and partys were plentiful, shit was epic.

I'm thinking there might be a good handful of us that went through a similar type of year when we were younger ?

Toscan - April 3, 2024, 6:35 am

I think it would have to be year 2016 when I found out about climbing. I absolutely love to climb at a climbing gym. Haven't been outdoor climbing really but I'd love to go whenever I get my chance. Or definitely year 2022 when my first son was born. ?

No to both.

Had some Ketamine like 2 months ago but haven't done anything in like 4 years before that.

I went too many years fighting poly-addiction, so when I finally was forced to get my head clear, I never went back.

All I do it Kratom now, which isn't really that bad imo, just something to help me relax a bit.

Oh yeah I think I commented on a thread of yours about poly addiction. My bad I'm sleepy asf now.

How was the ket experience?

I have tried Kratom a few times, I can't really remember why I did not continue. I think it may have lasted too short for me

I think that was someone else's that I also commented on :)

Ket is amazing, it's hard to describe and unlike any other drug out there, very unique. It like you can explore the deepest parts of your brain, it's really psychedelic but not the same as traditional ones / natural ones. It really depends on the dose though, you can do light doses and have a good social time or you can do bigger amounts and just lay down and dream pretty much, it's very comfortable and easy going, easy to control, not like LSD or Shrooms where you can have a "bad trip", sure some people can over-think it and let their anxiety ruin it, but I've never had that, even when I do a big amount and get a bit worried, it still is easy to just ride with it. You can literally forget that you're actually a person on it as it's an anesthesia drug.

Oh I know what ketamine feels like. I absolutely love it. Had both low and k-hole doses, just wanted to see how your experience was :)

Ahh I gotchu. Yea, this s-isomer I had last time was the most visually psychedelic stuff I've ever had, it really was similar to dreaming. I just laid on my bed alone in a dim room, no music or anything, and used it to get as deep in thought possible.

But yea, we got a lil off-topic here ?

I live in Florida so all the climbing here really is done inside a climbing gym. So I'd call myself a gym climber, more than a real rock climber. I have climbed some of the hardest grades in the climbing gyms tho. Maybe I'll post a video on here lol. Climbing gyms have a max height around here about 60FT. There is different types of climbing like, bouldering which is no rope, usually a route that isn't more than 15ft high, using no rope/harness. You got top-rope which you use a rope and have a belay partner. The rope is attached to a fixed anchor at the top of the route. You got lead climbing, trad-climbing, free-solo. So many different ways people climb.
