

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Alvin Hagg is currently under investigation for fraud!

IersSaint - April 9, 2024, 11:47 am

Our primary objective is not only to assist affected Freewallet users but also to ensure that those responsible for orchestrating the project face the appropriate legal consequences, including imprisonment. Our data suggests that there is a group of individuals behind the establishment of Freewallet, with Alvin Hagg possibly being a minor participant or serving as a figurehead. However, given his association with Freewallet, we insist on holding him accountable.

Recent developments indicate that Alvin Hagg and his associates have unlawfully appropriated coins from another victim. This victim, who was both educated and competent, promptly gathered evidence and filed a report with local law enforcement and relevant online fraud investigation authorities. Upon receiving the victim's letter, we swiftly engaged with local police, who confirmed Freewallet's fraudulent activities, having victimized numerous users. We have urged law enforcement to thoroughly investigate Alvin Hagg and any other potential suspects associated with the scam.

While a comprehensive review of all evidence will take time, it's evident that Alvin Hagg and his accomplices may soon face legal repercussions. We pledge to keep our readers informed of any developments that can be disclosed without compromising the ongoing investigation.

If you've incurred losses due to Freewallet's actions or possess information about Alvin Hagg or other project leaders' involvement in criminal activities, please reach out to us at

[deleted]

Your anonymity will be respected if desired.

To those who have lost coins due to the block, it's crucial to recognize that you've fallen victim to a scam. We encourage you to file reports with local law enforcement, demand investigations, and inform us of your efforts so we can offer the necessary support.

Omniscient - April 10, 2024, 9:14 am

This seems like a scam.