Thread: Proper way to bypass snapchat bans? Welp.

November - April 14, 2024, 2:38 pm

Not saying to unban myself but to keep using snapchat on the same device with a different account.

I have a Google Pixel 3XL, i reset it once from the settings and once from the boot menu.

Created a new account and within 12 hours it got banned.

I googled arround and it said to use an aged account. I did the same 2 reset steps, used the aged account and again it got banned.

Is there any way to bypass future bans? Is it a device ban?

What should i do...

Are you changing your IP address between bans?

Yeah i am. Tried both restarting my router (changes my ip everytime) but also even tried using only 4g data.

Your device is marked, you can try and install old version of graphane os and use it for creating profiles.

But even with that, "creating an account" will not work 100%. Device reset will change the android_id but it doesn't magically change other device unique identifiers.

Your best bet is to buy the accounts and login them into those profiles (containers).

For smooth logins, you can install some old version of Snapchat.

If latest one from play store works for you then skip this old apk step.

Coming to your aged account usage, they should have worked fine.

But again something is messed up on your end.

On all your tests, what you did after creating the account? or after you logged in that aged account? There are so many variables for the ban.

and lastly don't use VPNs! Saw someone suggested it.

Thank you for your suggestions! Basically i have heard that you could reset android phones and then you are good to go to keep using snap again and again.

I'm 50% sure on this one that the reason why they keep flagging that specific phone it's because its OEM locked...

I tried reflashing another OS or even an older android one and it doesn't let me.

Currently trying another device and so far so good (fingers crossed).

OEM lock has nothing to do with Snapchat.

If you install heavily modified OS then Snapchat will know.

Because it will have issues with SafetyNet Attestation, which Snapchat uses to verify device integrity.

New phone will work! But the issue will come back soon enough.

Is there a permanent solution to this? Based of my friends experiences they have had success with fully resetting their phones to just normal stock android.

Id love to try grapheneOS n stuff but prob once my new iphone gets banned..

Thanks for your detailed response by the way. I really appreciate it.

I have been ewhoring for a couple of years now and all the discords and communities i used to be are either closed or deleted.

Which has made this a bit lonely cause theres nobody to exchange any sort of information with.

Thanks again.
