Thread: Lost at 30 years old: Seeking Paths to my Redemption

HollowWeb - April 24, 2024, 7:07 am

Hey there, My name is Evan, hope you can give this message from heart a reading chance i feel lost:

after constant doubts i finally decided to share my journey with you. growing up in Morocco wasn't easy. Money was always tight in my family of seven & a father who works in a humble construction work, life especially was harder after my dad lost his job back in 2003 i was 10 back then. we had no power no water running through the house, I can still vividly recall studying with just candlelight for a straight year i remember the humility in asking neighbours for shower water from our neighbors.

Money was a rare thing growing up so i learned to get by myself in my teen years, i worked in construction with my father as a painter selling IPTV services..., anything to get by. Despite the constant struggle, I was determined to excel in school it was my only way out. Those long nights of parents arguing about finances and seeing my dad worry about grocery prices only fueled my determination that im gonna succeed in life. i had to make it there is no chance im gonna miss it or so i thought

Years went by, and with sheer grit, I managed to graduate from law school with honors in corporate law at 24. It should've been a moment of pure joy, but instead, it was laced with fear a fear of the unknown. job prospects in morocco were slim, very few dozens job listing for the whole country candidates by tens and sometimes hundreds of thousands making success seem like a distant dream. though i never let those thoughts consume me i had no luxury of doubts i had to make it & if someone was going to get the job listing by his effort why not me?

I applied for countless jobs, pouring over databases and thousands of legal texts for hours on end, only to face rejection after rejection. Then, finally, a glimmer of hope appeared when I aced the tests for the bar test. But that hope was shattered when I was asked for a hefty enlistment price in the tens of thousands of dollars just to secure the job I rightfully earned. that day was the worst day in my life how would someone like me afford a number like that i just had to give up

That betrayal hit hard. I felt lost and angry at myself at my country at the world for not giving me a fair fighting chance, i turned to smoking drugs as a way to cope with the pain. But I knew I couldn't stay in that dark place forever its mylife story and i should be the one deciding the ending. So, I decided to change course. I quit smoking, Started freequencing gym, and discovered a passion for computer science. that i had since college but i just left in bench because school nd work i started going through courses and i would rate my self honestly as a novice python programmer. i get the main concepts like structures data types conditional loops...etc

It's not easy admitting that u need help, i mean we as men we are WIRED to never complain always take whatever beating life has prepared for us with an open chest.

Going through all of this i realised i have something that most people dont have due to their circumstances, i have all the time in the world due to my unemployment, i have a decent computer and a solid internet service that im trying my best to keep on, BUT what im lacking is real life work experience i know nothing about corporate world as well, so maybe someone whos more fortunate than me would like to help outsource some work or an internship im willing to do it for free in exchange for getting to know how to establish myself into a whole new field & professional environment. im not looking for Handouts or Money this was never my attention & i feel like there are many people who less unfortunate & more deserving of it

ALL IM ASKING IS A FAIR CHANCE AT THIS LIFE TO PROVE IM WHAT IM WORTH. if not a lending ear is sufficient enough thank u for listening

I went back to school at the age of 25 to study computer science when all my friends were already graduates and had started buying their own apartments/houses. In my class, there were people much older than me, some of whom had been in jobs for over 20 years, that one day disappeared to be replaced. Don't focus on your age, on what you've done, or the passing time, concentrate on doing something you enjoy, that's the only thing that matters. Time will be more enjoyable, you will do something that makes you feel good, something you will excel in, and that's priceless.

There are no standards, and there is a quote that I like a lot that could resume this :

The best time to plant a tree was 30 years ago, the second best time is now.

That said, if you are looking for a job you should check the Service Requests section, and the marketplace in general. You need to read the Help Docs because there are specific rules related to this section, and just read them in general to avoid going against the rules.

You can also check this section for side hustles methods : Monetizing Techniques

However, be aware that there is always a risk when you deal, and we can't guarantee your safety. Besides, regarding this sentence :

"i would rate my self honestly as a novice python programmer. i get the main concepts like structures data types conditional loops...etc"

I don't think you could find a job as a programming beginner. You should first improve your skills. There is a Coders Lounge section, if you have question related to Python or other programming language you can ask there (how to learn more, what platforms to use, what courses are useful, and so on).

Finally, with enough programming knowledge, you could find remote job easily.

Good luck man

In same boat. Wife divorced me and took my house and most of my money and forcing me to pay alimony. Rather than pay the cunt a single penny more I fled the country . Now i need to make a living to survive (I have about 10 years before my money runs out) . I don't need much. Im in a 3rd world country ... Hope to learn and profit.

Well i am impressed by your story and i am glad that you are optimist and ambitious

I would tell you that you have a good opportunity to succeed online and this field is vast and a very good industry to dive in

The thing is succeeding online is not easy as presented by so many gurus and it takes time

,deddication and separation

Hope whatever negativity you are dealing with currently lessens, and it begins to get easier for you to find your way to success.

Showing up to work is a considerable part of it, a lot of people fail to do that. Keep showing up at attempts to make something better whether it is here, or in real life at a job, or where ever it takes you, with genuine effort to improve, I think you will get there.

Good luck
