You can sign up to test our program with our manager or through our website. Along with the program you will receive complete instructions (yes, we have a gitbook written with illustrations) so that you can understand the value of our software. We believe that a 24-hour test is enough for you to evaluate our product. If after the test you decide to purchase the program, you will receive a license key within 10 minutes after payment.

If the declared functionality does not work or the program does not function fully, we will refund your money. We will also add to your subscription all the time that the program will not function (this has never happened before, but for example, server failure)

For security reasons, we cannot leave direct contact in our telegram, so we suggest you contact us through our website, private messages or by writing to us in tam-tam. For more detailed information,

I understand you have stated you offer a trial to test the tool, but what is the price of a license after that? People here would tend to like to see the price point before taking their time to test something they won't be able to purchase due to lack of funds.

I agree with you. But I left a link to the site, where prices are indicated and the functionality of the program is described in more detail. Do you think this is not enough and it's worth listing prices here?

Don't forget to indicate your contact in Telegram when you leave a request on the site
