Thread: I just start learning Japanese

SIM-1866423 - April 29, 2024, 1:48 am

Within 1-2 years(probably way sooner) at max i will buy couple house in there.And ... of course i am trying to kill my ignorance and learning Japanese.Can anyone suggest me Kana vocabulary(pdf, app etc.) can't find any solid ones.First i am going to learn kana & vocabulary then going after kanji which seems like suggested thing even by Japan people.If there is any japanese i would like to bother them constantly just pm me, lol.

May be you will need chat apps like dulingo and watch some youtube videos too?

WaffleCream - April 29, 2024, 4:49 am

I started using Duolingo app to start learning Japanese.

I don't have much experience with this other than talking to a Columbian living in America who was teaching himself Japanese... lol...he was pretty good at it when I met him. Wish you the best with this venture!

Cool. So your plan in the end is to move out there and live? Or you will purchase houses out there to rent them out, and continue to reside in your current location? I know they say Chinese and Japanese are some of the hardest languages to learn, but not impossible. It sounds like you're serious about wanting to learn the language. Good luck!

yeap currently using almost all apps including duolingo also got tablet(samsung galaxy s6 lite with S pen for practice my writing skills), for me "renshuu" app is seems more effective also using "Kana Practice" for memorize every single alphabet and "MochiKana" for overloading lol.

My DMs are always open, feel free to send me a question about anything Japanese-related and I'll do my best to assist. ??

Thanks for the tag!

Thanks man i need to improve myself little bit more today just found out "renshuu" app for vocabulary it helps me a lot, planning to learning romanji & how to speak first atleast 500-1000 words or something then will go after kanjis. Since i am watching anime last 2 decades, for me its quite easy to memorize stuffs.

Just for fun, my dream to buy houses all over world and never stay in 1 place ever again. So in 10 years i want to reach 5 language(minimum intermediate) and minimum 4 different country home. It is my 3rd language right now.

Just get Elon's microchip bro, no need to study! Haha

Good luck man, that's an awesome language to learn, but there's so many Asian languages to the point I'd just learn Spanish instead ? jk, kinda.

That's actually a really bad ass dream and goal to have. And tbh, anything is achievable if you set your goals high enough. How many languages can you speak at the moment at an intermediate level? I wish you luck on one day achieving your goal!

DemonAsylum - April 30, 2024, 1:43 am

Tough ass language to learn, but I imagine a very rewarding one to learn as well. That's how I felt with mandarin anyway which was also a bitch. Best of luck to you!

I was thinking the same thing actually the other day... With these technical advancement shits no one will need to even learn language anymore , shet will be autopilot
