I read something like this somewhere:

"there are 2048^{12} ways to generate a seed phrase for a wallet with 12 words. This is 54,445,179,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000.

If you had 1 trillion computers, all guessing at 1 trillion times per second, it would take considerably longer than the age of the known universe"

Have you really found a wallet with any balance with brute-forcing 12 word seed phrase? i dont think so.

I bought the tool from him yesterday. Of course, the probability is low, I'm realistic and I'm not expecting huge success, I just see it as a lottery ticket.

I've also spoken to the coder and he's a great person, I've heard that more features are coming soon.

Also bear in mind that it's an opportunity where you can open one of the biggest wallets and it's easy to just run it on your PC on the side.

I'm really happy with it and the tool is stable.

There doesnt seem to be anyone who purchased yet or a review from a contracted customer. Looking forward to seeing the results of either a purchased customer or a vouched customer.

what he said, i say the exact same thing to everyone who asks for these "wallet bruteforcers"

i highly doubt this is legitimate, and this "vouch" from Hamstiii looks fake as fuck too, he was Last Seen May 8, 2024 01:34 PM (literally 5 minutes after he posted that vouch), and hasnt logged in since lol.

Yeah like alpacino said this looks shady as hell...The question is why would a 3 year member with a lots of threads and posts try to scam the community he belongs to? @ScreamCorp

This is essentially a scam. Even if you run this 24/7 until the day you die, and then your kids and their kids run it during their lifetimes, you will not get a single dollar.

You cannot post review without a contract bro. I was reprimanded by a staff by doing so. Read the forum rules

$200 for moth for lottery ticket , When it was $100, I was hesitant to buy it because I knew success was one in a million. Now that the developer says $200, I'd rather buy a more useful program with this money.good luck with sales
