Thread: Hey if no one told you today

Perfect - May 5, 2024, 7:00 pm

It's Okay,

Hey everyone, this is Perfect here. I just wanted to drop a quick message to remind you all that it's okay. It's okay if things didn't go as planned today, it's okay if you're feeling overwhelmed, and it's okay if you're not where you want to be just yet. Remember, you're doing great, and every step forward is a victory. Keep believing in yourself because if no one told you that you got it today, well, you most definitely do!

Why thank you for the words of encouragement. Sometimes we need to be reminded that there's numerous ways to get to grandma's house.

My condolences, kind sir. Grandparents are one of the greatest treasures life gifts us early on. You may have seen her for one last time, but she lives within you now. I'm sure she's looking over you for the rest of your journey.

Absolutely, it's important to remember that setbacks are a natural part of life. It's okay to not have everything go perfectly all the time. Being kind to yourself and recognizing your efforts is key. Keep pushing forward, believe in yourself, and know that you are capable of achieving great things. Peace to everyone

And in case OP did tell he loves you, I hate you, and I wish nothing but minor inconveniences upon you. I hope everything in your house is shifted over a couple inches or up a couple inches. Stairs included. I am the biggest hater.

Just kidding!

I hope this new guy hailuong finds what he is looking for, and decides to stick around, doing good things within the community. Hope everybody finds at least some success in their endeavors.

I challenge you to join me.

Who brings you joy in here ?

Don't be shy let them know !

Personally I love Hackers his views are impeccable and mostly on point with his views and thoughts on most topics.

Cooligan is a gentle giant on here along with his following of OGs on here that keep this forum alive.

We should all consider getting together to give back to hf. Give back to us. Give back to all :)

It's amazing how a simple action can bring forth such positivity. Especially amongst those that are suffering, such individuals that are looking for someone to land them a hand, or offer some form of reassurance.

That's a very optimistic approach. After all, we all share something in common, and that's to escape reality for a while.

Honestly you're the first today.

Been a morning dealing with the city of Nebraska and bs with the va. Gotta juggle them all but typically I don't let it reflect on how I act

Never let them to see you sweat! Attitude of gratitude. It is something I have been putting a lot of work into, myself! Even in the worst times.

There you go. It's time to start developing our core values.

If things don't work out that way you expected today, there is always tomorrow, and if they don't work out tomorrow, you have the next day, and the cycle continues. Never allow yourself to get too caught up in one moment, as it's only one small fraction of your life in the grand scheme of things.

I think the point of that story is accountability and reflection. If things didn't work out the way you expected today, you reflect upon your actions and decisions, then take accountability to make better decisions and take better actions for tomorrow. Positivity like 'don't worry' and 'don't get caught up' is all well, but in the end, it's all about accountability.

Just because something didn't work, doesn't mean that it's your fault that it didn't work. There are plenty of variables for why something may not work. No where in my reply did I mention anything about positivity or being positive... what I did say was, if something doesn't work.. don't waste too much time beating yourself up over... either try again, or move on.

Not sure how you got accountability out of what the OP said. What he said was words of encouragement, not a story. Are we talking about the same thing?

"I just wanted to drop a quick message to remind you all that it's okay.
