Thread: Help with bypassing a Lockdown test?\(educational purposes\)

Seanofdead - May 13, 2024, 11:03 pm

Hey y'all im set on finding a way to bypass Pearson Lockdown browser. I've tried Virtual machines, RATS, and even building my own server to transfer screen grabs over to my other laptop using TCP. The closest I had was when i built my own server and client using C#. I was able to get pass the system check but when I go to load the practice exam it doesn't stop my server connection but it somehow blocks/ stops the sharing of the screen capture? I didn't receive any errors or get disconnected just kinda froze and then when i closed the practice exam/program it picked right up where it left off. Any ideas on other options or work arounds. I've seen in the past that places offer something similar so I figure it is possible.

There are several videos on YT about tools, did you take a look at it ?

They are talking about the same tool I think.

However, I can only recommend that you pass the exam in the correct way. If you get a cert but you cheated to get it, you'll apply for jobs you're not qualified for. It's a waste of time for everyone. Recruiters are not dumb; they usually make you take a test during the job interview. Even if you're lucky and pass the test, you still have a trial period in which you'll have to prove yourself.

I've seen the tool. But I was trying to build something on my own. Also for further context I'm licensed already and have been conducting insurance for over 5years with no issues. We are required to re certify every 3 years and its more of a hassle having to study for non essential info that isnt used in daily work. But I appreciate your input.
