? NEW PRODUCT FROM Native-One

? GhostHook v1.0

GhostHook brings a new spreading method to the scene never seen before. Spreading with GhostHook will allow you to use a non malicious URL to later deliver the payload or website of your choice. The days of letting clients go because your software does not support the OS are over.

* GhostHook OS Compatibility:

- Windows
- Android
- Linux
- macOS

* GhostHook Browser Compatibility:

- Google Chrome
- Mozilla Firefox
- Opera Browser
- Microsoft Edge

* GhostHook Spreadable By:

- Posting a URL on social media.
- Posting a URL on a forum.
- Sending URL in email.
- Sending SMS with URL in message.
- Sending Whatsapp/Telegram/XMPP message with URL.
- Online QR Codes.
- Physical QR stickers.

* GhostHook More:

- Visit any website.
- Download any file. (direct link)
- Add to your current website.
- Upload your own HTML for campaign.
- Upload your own HTML for landing page.
- MUCH MORE!__

So, this really is an exploit to help deliver your payload; however, it could also be used for a popup advertising network.

You send the client a URL. The webpage they visit has a script that hooks the browser (meaning you stay connected). The browser communicates with the control panel (becoming a slave browser) and the attacker (student doing it for educational purposes, of course) then sends notifications that look like system notifications to get the client to interact with a download/install of the malware/software(payload) they wish to get installed.

For someone looking to mass spread, this could be great or someone wanting to profit from ad-networking could also do great.

I am not vouching for the software as I haven't used it nor can afford the price as I don't spread or ad network. I am just trying to assist in clarifying how this works and could be used.

Hello mate! It will not raise any alarms to browsers. It is used by major brands for advertising as well, but can be used for any type of website visit alert or download of file, ect ect.

Follow update in which I should of asked in my original post: I see it supports iOS devices? I assume it only works for like delivering phishing pages due to Apple's restrictions on iOS devices, but it will still sort of work? Also what I meant by "raise alarms on browsers" is that since this is a genius way to spread, companies of those browsers might try patch this by like making it harder to trick users via fake notifications? Obviously thats probably not gonna happen anytime soon but, I'm still gonna save up for this. Also no lifetime plans or yearly?

For it to work on IOS, user has to save the page to home screen then open it to trigger the alert. Browsers will not stop notifications, as it is used for many types of advertising. No we do not offer "Lifetime". If you are interested in anything longer then 3 months, just join our Telegram or PM me here and we can discuss that!

Thanks for being interested in Ghosthook, mate

dir7ym0nk3y - May 27, 2024, 2:11 am

I am little confused.

1. it malicious browser extension or what???

If so, I can't understand 2 points.

1) How is it possible to run it on mobile?

2) You said that it is spread via mail/SMS/SNS as URL.

it means they uploaded it to webstore?

2. It's main feature is send push alarms to victims to download malware or visit phishing page???

7 - May 27, 2024, 2:32 am

Now, this product looks good, like a modern beef framework.

Good luck with sales

dir7ym0nk3y - May 27, 2024, 6:26 am

Amazing!!!

I just tested it and it really works like a magic.

This idea is really tricky and creative.

Great works bro.

Thanks.

Thank you very much. Yes it can be used for anything, from having user get a notification to visit a url, download a payload anything.

We have people using it for OnlyFan, other Adult CPA, and for blackhat stuff.

It can be Whitehat, Greyhat or Blackhat!

Thanks NulldB

At the moment, I'm still hooking myself and amazed at how good the notifications are, especially on Android.

Ill be testing mlnk out next couple of days also once I get my stub crypted somewhere. Ill keep everyone posted on the results.

But what really interests me is the ability to use this more for indirect advertising. So Google stop you from advertising certain things but you can advertise something similar and drop the hook and then advertise from the browser notifications which looks amazing.

Yes I'm TRUSTED and our whole team is mate look at the vouches and reputation.

It bypass's every security as it is not malware....

You send the user a URL that is generated from GhostHook under "Landing Pages" when the user clicks allow the get hooked then in your panel

Then you can send that device a notification of your choice
Using Campaign Builder

You then send the notification to their device

When user clicks the notification it will then open any url of your choice.

You can contact us on Telegram, for a live demo.

Demo video doesn't work. Tried two links that you left on the forum.

Question 2: Does this require the user to click "Allow notifications" in the browser or it bypasses it?

Demo Video *Updated on main thread, too.

<https://jmp.sh/s/ffTrkQsy45wDe033fpqN>

No use has to click allow. It is impossible to bypass that part.

You can send the notification as long as the user not removed the permission from browser. (Which is very uncommon to do so). The user can clear cookies and cache and still will not remove the permission set on browser.

You should repackage this and remove all 'black hat' features and sell it just as a marketing tool at a much lower cost. Its honestly quite incredible.

Yes you right as a marketer i only need the sending notification part and nothing else. I am really interested on this product but paying for this 600 and making it profitable is tough but requires a roadmap.

I completely agree. $600/m means blackhat methods for easy cash is really the 'best' way to use this service, otherwise it has very very little use to most normal people. But its being advertised as a blackhat tool so thats understandable. It's not hard to make $600/m if you're regularly extorting thousands and thousands of innocent people. But for us with a better moral compass it's just not feasible.

If this tool ever drops down to $50-100~/m without the blackhat shit included I'll be purchasing it 100%

Would never be €50 - €100. Remember server cost, domain cost, all the coding we have done from scratch. But on v2 is released a v2 Lite will be available at a lower cost mates

This sales thread is actually finished.

I am the new seller and the new thread will be open soon.

Ren disappeared after taking money

Last Seen: Nov 19, 2024 04:30 AM

After selling a load of licenses he disappeared.

Licenses were honored by the owner.

New thread will be announced soon.

I am in conversation with the owner and developer and will represent this on HackForums from now on.

There is nothing I can do about closing the thread as there will be no deal disputes but Ren was Cherry and the ripped off the owner of the product as they were only the sellers of this product.

I own a copy of the product and believe in its value.

A new sales thread will be announced tomorrow
