Thread: stacks has Disputed a Contract with TayK \(5503701 \)

Sent $450 paypal to TayK in exchange for $450 worth of BTC. After sending payment yesterday, he confirmed he received and said he was sending BTC, but never sent. And he's stopped replying to convo.

As you can see, no transactions to the BTC address I gave him:

I don't expect a resolution here. This is just a warning for anyone thinking about doing business with TayK. He's a scammer.

Communicate and ask for refund if he is unable to make transfer.

Or, since you sent PayPal, just Chargeback and talk to PayPal customer support.

The only other message I've received from TayK was in the last 15mins (The convo/exchange is from 21hrs ago), and it's just him playing stupid.

Quote:sent it? i figured thats why you completed the contract

No point in wasting more time pleading with a scammer. If he wants to do the right thing and complete his end of the contract (or refund the paypal transaction), he obviously knows he can. And if that happens, I will close the dispute.

Yea, I assumed as much. I gave him more than enough time before opening the dispute. I've done enough currency exchanges to know when someone is attempting to scam. This dispute is just a warning for others.

Hello. TayK here.

Imagine going first on a 69 days old account with 9 B-Ratings....

I hope you got your lesson now you fucking cunt. Thanks for the money, it will support my gambling addiction.

Omniscient you can ban my accounts, i'm not planning to refund this little bitch and staying active on your dogshit forum.

Enjoy your little victories. Soon enough you'll be out of your scammed money and regretting not learning an actual fucking skill that will make you some legit money. It could be weeks, months, or even a few years until you hit that realization. But it will come and it will fuck you hard. Easy come, easy go.

I obviously considered all this before doing the exchange. Normally, I wouldn't go first with a user who has that much less cred than me, but it's been awhile since I've been on HF (last exchange I completed with a user was July 2023), and it appeared like TayK had successfully completed a handful of currency exchanges recently, and based on his post count and time spent on HF, I figured he wouldn't want to ruin his rep (ie: start a new account) over $450.

Clearly, I didn't realize how desperate he was for a few hundred bucks, or how little his time is worth to build up this account for 2 months just to make $450 (and likely lose his PP account). I've completed nearly 200 exchanges on HF over the years, and I've only lost money to a scammer once before. Maybe this will be the second time, depending on how I handle Paypal, but it is what it is.

Why haven't you created a chargeback yet on PayPal? Just tell them the money was sent without your knowledge and it'll be refunded. Easy. Friends and Family or not. They will refund it.

How long do you expect $450 to last? You said that as if you got over on a few thousand dollars. Congratulations on being a loser.

Sorry about your loss. Not really surprising that he has a track record of doing this, considering the way he came back and bragged about it, as if he really made some big accomplishment in life. He'll be broke before the week is over. Just take it as a lesson learned. Yeah, he had 9 B-Ratings, but they were likely all small exchanges or purchases just to increase the number/credibility, so that in the end he could go out like the loser he was.

You've been doing this HF thing way longer then me, so my advice probably doesn't mean much, but I would advise you to question everything when it comes to doing any deals on here. It's easy to be mislead into believing someone or something is official, when in reality they're not. If I'm going to do a deal of any large amount on-site, it will either be thru a MM, or it would have to be with someone who has multiple recent transactions, for similar amounts or larger.. as this will significantly decrease the chance of the person being an exit scammer.

Have you filed a dispute with PayPal yet? It shouldn't be too difficult to get your money back, depending on how you filed the case, and what details you put in the description of the transaction. If you would like help with filing it correctly, feel free to shoot me a PM.

Absence - May 29, 2024, 9:16 pm

Considering this was done over PayPal, there may be hope in you recovering your money OP. There is a way to do it, but make sure you do it right the first time.

As Mooooookie iterated, I would consider starting to make healthy and safe trade practices apart of every transaction, large or small. It will weed out scammers, and people who pressure you over "small inconveniences" are, most of the time, scammers.

Sorry for your loss. You've already received advice about using MMs and whatnot. Maybe deal in installments as well (but BTC fees would make this shitty). PayPal now offers crypto options I believe? So you could now buy Crypto on PayPal, is this not an option for your account? I figured you would have just bought it PayPal. Or you could always buy somewhere and exchange.

I actually forgot all about that you could purchase BTC directly from PayPal. I've never done it myself, but I have seen the option in the app numerous times, and know of users who have used it. Depending what country he's in, if he resides in the US.. he can use Cash App to purchase BTC, and it will be available instantly for trade/sell. While these options may have more fees involved, they also guarantee you a safe transaction every time.

Cash out to bank account & use P2P on Binance/Bybit for USDT. Convert to BTC.

Open dispute on Paypal.

I'm sorry for your loss OP, but for the future I'd use a trusted middleman for this kind of transaction like Cooligan

As well as not go first in transactions with people that have less B-rating, unless they own a group or something and actually have something to lose other than an account worth $40 (investment wise)

Have fun gambling, you degenerate.

Have fun living in a 3rd world country, loser. Keep scamming kid.

Have fun with your $450, hope you enjoy it while it lasts. Like someone else said, one day you will look back at your life and realize you have 0 skills, 0 value, and 0 potential. I hope when that day comes you think back to this moment and realize you could've stayed here to learn skills and make hundreds of thousands of dollars, but your pea brain settled on as little as $450.
