On the Internet, nothing is truly spontaneous or dictated by instinct. Our profiles are no different from the walls of an art gallery or museum: everything posted is a symbol of something that can be deciphered and understood in its context. Just like a ready-made that acquires new meaning when displayed in a fancy gallery, each of our enigmatic contents hides a secret message. We're aiming to be obscure, to convince ourselves that we have finally come to understand something that no one else can ever come close to grasp. We have had enough of internet microtrends, the endless little niches that suddenly turn mainstream. We are tired of coming face to face with the fact that we are all, hopelessly, inevitably, the same. We long for individuality, not globalization. And the saddest thing? Instagram is far from saving us. Because nothing, absolutely nothing is too complex for users. And if entropy is the Zeitgeist, there is no secret anymore: we've discovered it already.

The way I see it is if I start with something small like 1-2k it won't be that big of a loss in the end.
Now somehow we are at 15k XD.

I think I am up to like 32k bytes total lmao from this week. I just don't understand why if I go to stake or something and I bet irl I lose everything but the moment I use bytes we winning boys.

$60+ will pay for a few tools this week though haha, I was thinking about putting it all on 49ers tonight and maybe using that money to build a new site or something.

I used to play a private server for that game. Server had around 1,500 people. And of course like any gaming community there were some extremely hardcore people who spent god know how many thousand of dollars for that private server. From either gold buying or from buying pixel items for real life cash.

Insane.

At least with COD, the micros are just skins and don't impact the gameplay at all.

Thing is, it wasn't even microtransactions from the private server but from other people.
