Thread: What's your go-to table game?

SpiritualDose - June 4, 2024, 9:05 am

I used to have a fat crush on roulette, but it's always ended up terrible.

Typically I start on blackjack, do some counting of cards for a few shoes and walk (usually) up. Then I go to baccarat and play a specific strategy

^ I start on Player, and if that wins I stay on player. If that loses, I double my bet and go banker. if AT ANY TIME in that pyramid you win, you reset back to basic units at player.

You continue doubling for each loss, so player (loss), 2x bet Banker (loss), 2x bet Player etc etc.

See I like roulette but it's not consistent and the odds are against me.

Blackjack has much better odds as a player, and is fun and something you can sit down at for a while.

Im no good at counting cards and just wing it when it comes to Blackjack so my go to tends to be roulette. A little black or red/odd or evens to build it up a little and then freestyle.

My go to now a days seem to be flipping on the convo. Stanley always wins.

.Pazuzu - June 7, 2024, 7:54 am

Texas Hold 'em is my go to, play blackjack too but depends on the table rules,

Never touched a slot inside a Casino, got incredibly ridiculously stupidly lucky on online slots so don't think i'll tempt fate again

Definitely blackjack for me. Always an easy go to and that I have a better handle on than any other table games.

Cooligan - June 27, 2024, 7:31 am

Legit since I was around 8-10 years old when I learned how to play Texas Hold'em, I never went back to any other table game besides Blackjack.

Hold'em is just what I'm best at and also what I enjoy the most.

I love playing BJ but I would be interested to try out your Bacarat strategy. It seems interesting.

I've messed with Baccarat a bit. Never got too into it, but it's not bad.

It's said to be the lowest house edge game.
