Thread: Get MSN passwords from users who have stored their passwords.

RogueR3x - August 21, 2010, 4:05 pm

Yep..just like the title says..if they use the option "remember my password" when signing onto MSN you can get their pass with one single program in less than 2 seconds.

<http://www.download3k.com/Install-MessenPass.html>

That's the program.

I find no reason to post pictures or anything on this post as even a complete n00b could do this. Just download and execute.

why i'm so sure this is a virus?

no one will trust a person with 4 post ..

RogueR3x - August 21, 2010, 4:15 pm

If you doubt me you could run it in a virtual machine instead of posting here..

FeaRxToNii - August 21, 2010, 4:17 pm

Warning to all members, I would take severe caution whilst downloading this file.

A virus scan may not be enough.

So now it has become a threat..?

since you guys doubt so badly...<http://www.nirsoft.net/utils/mspass.html> even a description of it.

Only will work on your computer though..

Sephiroth_ - August 21, 2010, 5:17 pm

Just run a trusted keylogger on your own computer before the person signs in to msn. Same result and safer than downloading from a dubious person.

Don't forget to turn off your Anti-virus scanner. Otherwise it will raise suspicion.

Have fun!

To me that sounds like it's gonna take longer..that's just me..I even find Windows taking longer to do stuff on...

Vouch for Nirsoft softwares, they work (Most of the time) and are virus free.

I'd download from nirsoft.com if you really wanted, to be sure.

I didn't say anything about the difference in speed. I don't think speediness is an indicator in terms of effectiveness of hacking. On the contrary, depending on numerous factors (including intelligence of the hacker), most of the time hacking takes time.

Anyway, you choose your method, I'll choose mine.

Good luck ?

The funny thing about this message is that by the time you realize it doesn't say anything smart it's too late to stop reading.
