Thread: Tissue Phobia

Quann - June 21, 2024, 6:22 pm

I know this may come off as strange, and no I am not joking.. But since I was a kid, I have had a tissue phobia, I'm genuinely afraid of tissue. This stemmed from stepping on wet tissue in school, I'm talking about tissue that had been sitting there on the bathroom floor for awhile, got wet, stepped on, and moved around from place to place. Idk, I just find it quite nasty when tissue is wet and just sitting there. I'm afraid to step on tissue still, and very afraid that it will get stuck to my bare feet, or even my shoes.

Btw, it's so bad that my family obviously knows, and they will intentionally chase me with wet tissue.

Who can relate, please tell me someone else feels the same way I do lmao

Wet tissue looks like "paper mache" and that traumatised me as a kid during creativity class.

Pretty funny to be this afraid of tissue but I guess if it traumatized you you're traumatized. I recommend some therapy, or drugs.

So you're scared of wet tissue? What about dry tissues?

I have a fear that when I'm on the toilet a rat or a snake will crawl up the drain and bite my wiener, like no joke. I watched a clip on the news once after major flooding and residents were having stuff like that happen. I always look into the bowl if I've been there too long. Its like a legit nightmare for me. I never poop in peace :(

Fr man, Now that I'm older I find it even more disgusting like I don't know where that tissue been ?

Kallebanan19 - June 24, 2024, 9:49 pm

I can't stand the feeling of dry cotton

Syndicate - June 24, 2024, 11:43 pm

That's definitely an odd phobia. I haven't heard of someone being afraid of wet tissues. It's gross, yeah. But afraid?

DemonAsylum - June 25, 2024, 7:43 pm

Quite an interesting phobia and that I haven't heard of someone having. I'm sure there is much "weirder" or "stranger" ones out there as well though.
