What games is everyone currently playing? trying to find something with a decent learning curve

I'm playing cs2 because I hate my life. However Bauldurs Gate 3 is worth trying.

Bodycam is 10/10 . Very cool play style

Interesting, I haven't even heard of this one. I'll have to check it out.

For me it going to be db sparking zero, going back to the memories of playing budokai with friends

I'm not a gamer anymore, not really aware of the new games released, the next one I'll try is Elden Ring's DLC I think, but I'll wait few months until the price decreases (hope it will)

I've heard lot of good things about bodycam tho, maybe just a hype because of the GFX, don't know about the gameplay

Bodycam looks fun, Might give it a try tonight

Pacific drive was very good I hope more games like that come out

MX Bikes if you like dirt bike games. Takes a while to get the hang of it, but very rewarding when you race online or play with friends on freeride/MX/SX maps. Tons of free mods/tracks/liveries.

For VR check out VTOL VR, flying sim with MP (same aircraft) PVP online dog fights/PVE Missions!

Both have to learn the ropes.

[EDIT] Project Zomboid is a fun in depth zombie survival game with friends. Tons of mods for quality of life gamestyles.

I've been playing a lot of Apex Legends again recently. Had the shooter / BR itch come back.

Depends on your genre big boy.

The fat American beer guzzler no contests CFB 25, but the plot lover assumes by December it'll either be BO6 or Elden Ring.

The legend of zelda Tears of the kingdom was really good. Lot of fun things to do with the ultrahand. And it's relatively easy.

Hopefully BO6 is any bit good. As for Elden Ring, masterpiece. You're going to love it ?

Amazing game. I plan to go back to it myself at some point. Maybe this year, we'll see how things go with upcoming expansions and new games.
