

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Front end or back end

Noble - July 7, 2024, 8:05 am

To all my software devs out there, which one is more simple to work with, front end or back end?

TooBurnt - July 7, 2024, 8:19 am

Pretty subjective. Some people are better designers and have a better eye for front end while some people may think differently and not have a "eye" for it but can write insane code for the backend without a problem.

Noble - July 7, 2024, 8:30 am

(Jul 7, 2024 08:19 AM)TheDiddler Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Pretty subjective. Some people are better designers and have a better eye for front end while some people may think differently and not have a "eye" for it but can write insane code for the backend without a problem.

Interesting take. I'm on the verge to learning about this field and leaning towards learning about the back end first, but still doing some research before I make a final decision.

DashPHP - July 8, 2024, 1:13 am

Front end is 1000000% more easier than backend. I come from backend and migrated to full stack.

Backend there is much more considerations to make when building high quality long lasting software.

ShadowCipher - July 17, 2024, 8:13 am

I am better with backend as design is not really my thing. But everyone is different.