AI Video Generation Backend: Efficient, Scalable, Profitable

What It Is

- Self-hosted, multi-tenant backend engine for generating AI videos
- Covers short-form (TikTok, YT Shorts, Reels) and long-form content
- Diverse niches: facts, book summaries, news, NSFW, manga, comics, poems, songs

Key Features

- Cost: $0.10 per minute of video generated
- Built on: ElevenLabs, Stable Diffusion, OpenAI, AWS
- Scalable and robust architecture
- Average video generation time: 45 seconds max
- Custom-built codebase, no reliance on no-code platforms

Use Cases

1. Create your own content
2. Build a frontend and sell as a service (e.g., VideoTok.app, YTShorts.ai)

Market Opportunity

- Competitors charge 100x more (VideoTok, YTShorts and a plethora of more service)
- Proven success: Multiple YouTube channels with 1M+ subscribers using similar tech

Technical Details

- Faceless AI video generation
- Handles various content types and lengths
- Easy integration with existing platforms
- Self-hosted solution for complete control and customization
- Multi-tenant architecture for serving multiple clients or projects

Cost Efficiency

- Entire codebase built from scratch
- No reliance on expensive third-party services or no-code platforms
- Results in significantly lower operational costs, passed on to you

Bottom Line

This is a developer-built, no-frills backend system. It's not flashy, but it works. If you're looking to enter the AI video market without the typical startup costs, this is your chance. With self-hosting and multi-tenancy, you have full control and scalability.

Interested? Let's discuss partnership or ownership of the complete platform.

Will provide multiple free demo to interested folks.

I'm keen for this, I've ran multiple channels and have been involved in social media account growth for like 6-8 years now.

Hmu.
