Hello guys

I want to shares with you a site called ExplainShell

The websites gives you reference info on any linux command.

Just type the appropriate command with all its arguments in the search box and you'll get an explanation of what each argument does.

It's good for getting an idea of the functionality, as it explains it arguments by arguments

Hopes you can better understand what each one refers to,

Check the websites : <https://explainshell.com>

Nice website, when I was learning years ago, I bought a big ass desk keyboard with all the commands, helped me out so much.

My deskpad with a Linux command cheat sheet and ChatGPT or Copilot have me well covered.
