Thread: What languages can you speak?

Spaced - August 14, 2024, 9:35 am

So here's a little something I've been pondering; What Languages can you speak and why did you learn it? For example;

Language: English

Level: Fluent

Reason: I was born and raised speaking it

Language: French

Level: Semi-fluent

Reason: I learned to speak it while in the education system

Language: German

Level: Semi-fluent

Reason: I learned to speak it while in the education system

Language: Greek

Level: Semi-fluent

Reason: I visit Greece a lot for holidays and know a few Greek people locally

Language: Bengali

Level: Learning

Reason: For the last few months I have been learning Bengali to speak to the staff at our local Indian that we frequent on a regular basis - more out of a respect thing

Language: Sinhala

Level: Learning

Reason: Similar to the above, a member of staff joined the restaurant that was from Sri Lanka so I have been learning to speak with them

I pick up languages quite easily so I'd be interested to hear what languages people know and which ones were easy to pick up.

Oooo Arabic. Now I've heard that most languages like Bengali and Sinhala originate from Arabic, is that true? I do see some similarities and I wonder if there's a collective of languages that are similar that would be easy to pick up.

I'd love to learn Spanish, I feel like it's quite a "sexy" language, like Italian. Or maybe that's just what the movies say.

Arabic - Fluent in speaking but no certificate, can read but can barely write

Persian - ^

German - A2 level but stopped learning it

Mandarin - HSK 2 level, but stopped learning it

Started learning Sawahili recently, have a good business plan to execute in Kenya/Congo and know some royals but need to learn the language before I do anything.

Rionxee - September 16, 2024, 1:54 pm

English Fluently (native speaker), Latin Advanced as I grew up in Catholic education, Spanish Intermediate.

SIM-5545178 - September 29, 2024, 8:19 pm

Native Portuguese level. It's where I'm from.

Advanced Spanish level. I spent a lot of time in Spain for work.

Intermediate English level. I write and read very well, but speaking costs me a bit.

Russian, I am currently learning at level A2, and its because my girlfriend is Russian from Yekaterinburg. It seems like a very interesting language to me.

Welsh - Born natural language
English - Native speakers

---- My reading is good in the below but not the writing ----

Spanish - Semi-Native 9 years of living in Spain
Swedish - Basic but also good as they understand most Norsk
Norsk - Veldig Bra, jeg ar flink
Danish - Forstar og snakker litt
Romanian - inteleg romana si vorbeste destul de bine
Russian - Speak & Understand alot but not fluent

So because of the mixture of latin, romantical and germanic languages I can understand quite alot more languages than this also Like Italian e.t.c

LeetSpeed - October 3, 2024, 11:08 pm

I know English, Norwegian, German, Danish, Swedish, Spanish, French, I can understand some Italian, some Portuguese and I have started learning some Russian recently and I am currently studying Russian.

Language: English
Reason: Native speaker

Language: Norwegian
Level: Fluent
Reason: Native speaker

Language: Swedish
Level: Fluent
Reason: It is almost the same language Norwegian, also I used to work in an office where we had plenty of different European offices in the same office, I was the Trainer for new hires as well as expert for the people who had been there a longer time, so I interacted with a bunch of different nationalities in a bunch of different languages.

Language: Danish
Level: Fluent
Reason: Same reasoning as for Swedish, it is almost the same language, however Danish is harder than Swedish due to more differences in words and a huge difference in pronunciation.

Language: German

Level: Semi-Fluent

Reason: German is not exactly like the other Nordic languages however, it has similarities and thus was really easy for me to pick up and understand. I also talked German with a lot of my co-workers and have plenty German friends.

Language: French

Level: Semi-Fluent

Reason: I learned to speak this language back in school and also have worked in a workplace with a bunch of French people, so I used to speak french with them.

Language: Spanish

Level: Semi-Fluent

Reason: I worked in Spain for a few years and had to learn Spanish to survive, also I have plenty Spanish friends as I used to live in Spain.

Language: Italian

Level: Semi-Fluent

Reason: Italian and Spanish is very similar and I know more Spanish than Italian, however I have a good understanding of Italian as well.

Language: Portuguese

Level: Semi-Fluent

Reason: The same for Portuguese as Italian, it is very close to Spanish and because I speak such good Spanish as well as other Latin languages I have easy to understand Portuguese.

Language: Japanese

Level: Only the alphabet (Hiragana, Katakana)

Reason: I started learning Japanese in school when I was young but dropped out because at the time I thought it was too difficult, I want to get back to it and learn it now when I have more passion for learning than what I did when I was young

Language: Russian

Level: Just started learning

Reason: So far I have learned the Cyrillic alphabet and can thus read Russian letters and words, however I have yet to learn as much regarding words and sentences and I am at the moment understanding about as much as a Russian 5 year old. I started learning Russian because I have Russian friends and want to be able to talk to them.

Most languages I learn is to understand more people. I would like to learn as many languages as possible so that I can travel or meet people from around the world and be able to be understood and for them to understand me.

Learning languages is a passion of mine.
