

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: What changed the way you see the world?

Eran - August 14, 2024, 11:39 am

First would be psychedelics. It has definitely made me think in ways that's hard to describe. It's a positive thing though.

And, being able to make lots of money online before my method became saturated and I've since then stuck with the 9-5 life. What I'm trying to say is, I have made more money working less before ever having a job, so it's definitely helping me push harder because I've realized a 9-5 and what most consider a normal life, isn't for me.

Wbu?

StinkButt420 - August 14, 2024, 1:04 pm

A long time ago, I saw a homeless guy dead with a needle still in his arm. Skin real pale, so he'd been there for a while. Right in front of one of the busiest streets in the city. A block away from the fire department. I was 14, I was the only one who told someone.

Before that, around 10, my aunt's boyfriend hit her in front of the entire family. My cousin called his dad, but he didn't do anything. When we lived with them, her boyfriend threw a bottle of painkillers at MY mom. My dad did nothing either.

Of course charges didn't get filed. They never press charges.

I'm pretty sure this is why I'm so cynical now.

DrStrangeone - August 14, 2024, 2:27 pm

(Aug 14, 2024 11:39 AM)Eran Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) First would be psychedelics. It has definitely made me think in ways that's hard to describe. It's a positive thing though.

And, being able to make lots of money online before my method became saturated and I've since then stuck with the 9-5 life. What I'm trying to say is, I have made more money working less before ever having a job, so it's definitely helping me push harder because I've realized a 9-5 and what most consider a normal life, isn't for me.

Wbu?

First was Ron Paul, and the 08 housing bubble lost material items but still had family, then mushrooms, then owning my own business. Since then I can't go back to a 9-5 life I've tried and my health just goes down hill thrutl - August 14, 2024, 2:43 pm

(Aug 14, 2024 11:39 AM)Eran Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) First would be psychedelics. It has definitely made me think in ways that's hard to describe. It's a positive thing though.

And, being able to make lots of money online before my method became saturated and I've since then stuck with the 9-5 life. What I'm trying to say is, I have made more money working less before ever having a job, so it's definitely helping me push harder because I've realized a 9-5 and what most consider a normal life, isn't for me.

Wbu?

when I started to dive deep into esoteric knowledge, mainly hermeticism. It really changed everything for me.

Mr_Kh4os - August 14, 2024, 8:26 pm

Definitely the first time I did DMT that and Sass I actually told my best friend after I did Sass that is EXACTLY how I felt my perspective felt like it took a step back on everything in a much more relaxed/less serious way.

paragram - August 14, 2024, 11:14 pm

Playing warthunder

All jokes aside, I think that taking the time off and traveling abroad to go and live with a family or dorm in another country is super life changing. It certainly exposed me to other cultures and ways of thinking I haven't really thought about before. I also think that having a relationship can really change someone. I noticed that I started to experience whole brand new emotions. Pretty cool stuff ngl

Eran - August 15, 2024, 5:08 am

Pretty interesting replies here, cool!

Purgatory - August 15, 2024, 11:03 pm

My interactions with older people. As well as just more intelligent individuals.