

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Dell Absollute Persistence

raspito - August 14, 2024, 5:54 pm

I've got a Dell Latitude 3190 with Absollute Persistence technology installed how can I remove it? I can't click permanently disable or disable at all it's greyed out. If impossible without soldering or something like that how can I remove all these group policies and stuff on Windows and not have them come back? They come back every reboot with my experience.

Bastille - August 14, 2024, 10:25 pm

There is an interesting thread here :

<https://security.stackexchange.com/questions/53698/detecting-and-removing-absolute-persistence-technology>

It seems that it's not like uninstalling a program through appwiz.cpl

They're speaking of :

- changing your BIOS
- contacting Absolute Software

DramaKing - August 15, 2024, 4:37 pm

(Aug 14, 2024 05:54 PM)raspito Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I've got a Dell Latitude 3190 with Absollute Persistence technology installed how can I remove it? I can't click permanently disable or disable at all it's greyed out. If impossible without soldering or something like that how can I remove all these group policies and stuff on Windows and not have them come back? They come back every reboot with my experience.

Do you own this laptop or was it acquired through some illegitimate means?

Byte Wizard - August 15, 2024, 4:51 pm

(Aug 14, 2024 05:54 PM)raspito Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I've got a Dell Latitude 3190 with Absollute Persistence technology installed how can I remove it? I can't click permanently disable or disable at all it's greyed out. If impossible without soldering or something like that how can I remove all these group policies and stuff on Windows and not have them come back? They come back every reboot with my experience.

A quick once over of their product makes it seem like it would be a better option to throw away or sell the device and get a new one

Best of luck with that raspito - August 17, 2024, 7:23 am

(Aug 15, 2024 04:37 PM)DramaKing Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Do you own this laptop or was it acquired through some illegitimate means?

School laptop

DramaKing - August 17, 2024, 7:31 am

(Aug 17, 2024 07:23 AM)raspito Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) School laptop

Then ask the school to remove the tracking as they should have done before they sold it to you. I noticed that you dodged the question. If it's still school property, forget it. Absolute Persistence has probably been reporting your tampering.

