Bi-Weekly tournament between all groups that enter. Charge either a byte fee or a Bitcoin fee per player required ie: $20/p League=$100 entry, Risk=$20 entry. Winner keeps a percent, house keeps a percent. Add these games to the sports betting to encourage participation outside of players.

Give the winning teams "Group Battle Points" to spend on awards and other goodies like sticky credits, the amount of points people get is based on the size of the group and placement in the tournament.

Entry requirements: group must have an overall warning level below 10% (this might be an issue if we bring mentors back), group must have at least 100 posts in the last 30 days outside the SF.

I am willing to host the first one to gauge response before creating a whole new plugin.

Edit: seems like there is a little confusion on what the battles would be.. a good example would be maybe one battle would be a custom Minecraft plugin that separates players into their team and the first team to beat the ender dragon wins. Pvp enabled, your team can have unlimited players but remember every player costs $20.

Another weekend it could be a simple ARAM tournament, blackjack, CSGO, TFT, Yahtzee, etc etc. I am once again proposing we push Group Battles.

Potential profit off your group, make the forum more active, actually have fun with groups again.

Could certainly be fun

Benevolence would be on board, but it may prove difficult to get that level of activity going.

I'd be interested in a trial run with something small onsite. The trickiest part these days is getting people available all at one time.

Perhaps a week long event (or longer) that users complete at their own pace. Most posts in a week, most referrals in a month, writing competitions, graphic competitions, highest score/winnings in a mini game, etc. All officially sanctioned by HF.

Duel battles could very well be a weekend.

This is something I'd be interested in participating in.

Secret Society, Fallen, and Benevolence are decently active.

Pink is active offsite.

Refactor seems like they're going to try and be more active as well and have a recent recruitment thread.

If you just want to rock a userbar, you could test your luck with the Gamblers coin flip as well

My best advice is to find a group that aligns most with your ideals and interests. Some groups just need a few more active regular members to get things off the ground.

I think as long as it didn't turn into anything toxic and stayed friendly for the most part, then yes this could be a lot of fun and great for activity.

I'd be down for an ARAM tournament.
