Thread: Looking for IPTV Testers \(48-hour trial\)

Harald - September 5, 2024, 10:31 pm

I'm looking for a select group of users to participate in a 48-hour trial of an IPTV service that I'll be launching in a few months.

During the trial, you'll have the opportunity to test the service and report any issues you encounter, helping us make final improvements.

I think you should plan to test next weekend. It's UFC 306. Usually the popular UFC cards get a bunch of traffic and they tend to crash when the big fights on the main card start. I purchased probably 5 one year accounts from different sellers on here so when one crashes I start switching around trying to find a working one.

A lot of the IPTV customers here purchase them around this time of the year for the sporting events.

Oh, that would've been perfect timing! However, this trial will be running for a few more weeks at least, to ensure my client's system is fully functional before the official launch. Right now, the focus is on thoroughly testing the billing process, making sure everything is automated and working smoothly, along with gathering general feedback for improvements.

If anyone wants to claim a trial next weekend, you're more than welcome to do so!

Hey guys, apologies for the delay – I've been at work. I've just sent over the details you need to get everything set up. Let me know if you need anything!

josimc - September 6, 2024, 4:42 pm

I have looked into these services before but never followed through with it since it's completely new to me.

I would love to be a tester for you! Would give me the chance to learn a little more about these services.

vyactor - September 6, 2024, 6:28 pm

Hello. Would love to give it a trial. Let me know if I can be in.
Thanks in advance!

techpacket - September 6, 2024, 8:27 pm

Hi, I will be glad if I can participate in the trial session. Please provide details.

If you're still in the market for a tester, I'd be happy to give this a go for NCAAF and NFL over the weekend.

The Vegas Sphere is so damn cool man.

Just looked at a few random pics of it on Google, man I want to see one of those 360 degree concerts so bad.
