Thread: Micro Tasks Website

Engima - September 7, 2024, 7:02 am

I have this idea for a long time as I was selling real reviews and such small tasks here on HF for a while.

I own a website that has over 3000 workers (mostly from Middle East) and I was giving them tasks through the website for a very small amount of money.

Whenever someone wants some reviews I simply create a task on the website that I need X amount of people to do this task for X amount of money for each.

But, what if I sold access to this website for individuals like users here on HF that can create any task they want whenever they want by just charging the account with balance and that's it?

Would that work here? like to give people access to the website itself or just keep it through me here?

I think that's a fantastic idea. Can even be implemented AS captcha solvers too.

YOu have some serious potential here if you really have 3000 workers ready to go.

Well 3429 to be exact and I get about 40-50 new users per day

That idea has huge potential. You could enhance it by categorizing the tasks and offering tiered pricing based on complexity or demand, which could attract higher-paying clients and optimize the worker pool.

I already categorized the tasks by the following categories

Data Entry

Marketing

Development & IT

Design & Creative

Video Editing

Writing & Translation

I also like to leave the user who post the job to have the full control of pricing the task as long as it's not super cheap

You'd probably make more selling the reviews and things that these users can be used for etc than access; however, maybe you'd probably have more sales if it was sold like this so it's kinda whatever you'd rather manage.

I thought of this yea and one thing that concerns me if I gave access to someone who might abuse it for his own personal gains or even affect my website's reputation

I'd say best bet is selling the service then, make a list of what they can do and then add a markup fee for more profit for yourself ezipz.

Setup a captcha completing service like 2captcha does, setup review services etc and maybe even article writing sorta thing if you have any fluent english speakers.

Lots of options with that many people ready to complete tasks.

Reminds me of another website that offers this as a service. Imho running this as a service for other people to hire on your platform is the right move if you're interested in monetizing it.

Let me know if you're interested in selling this platform.

So you think I should let people use the website on their own and I just keep an eye on it?

I might sell it if the price is good

Interesting, I am definitely following this.

Would anyone be interested buying this website?
