Not really a haxxor bro, not as knowledgeable as you haha 7 but would like to join the giveaway.

Yanix - September 14, 2024, 12:51 am

I'm not into hacking, but when I was younger, I used to "hack" into my mom's wallet lol...just kidding aside.

Another cool giveaway from a great member. Thanks for hosting another one 7

People are chiming in with their l33t h@xing but notice how none of it is affecting me, proving that I exist beyond the realm of l33t h@x0rs. Ub3r h@x0rs are the only ones who can try but they too, like everyone else, will fail.

SecureOp - September 14, 2024, 1:34 am

I'm a real haxor for still using a forum, while all the normies chime on social media. Beat that.

Wow another contest from you, thanks a lot for your generosity buddy 7 <3

Well, I remember back in my school days I had a program (Forgot the name) where you could easily access your your classmates phones via IR Port (Yeah I don't believe Bluetooth was a thing on phones back then)

So yeah, by just putting your phone as close as you could to your "victims" phone (IR Port Range), I could access their phone and do whatever I wanted to, I mainly just trolled and put some music on at the highest volume on their phone in the classroom etc.

I felt like a g0dly hax0r.
Nah but it was actually really fun, good old times.

This is my first entry by the way, fun to read others stories as well :=)

I'm that person who sees a locked door and thinks, "That's just a suggestion!" Instead of "Why me?" I ask, "Why not root access?" I've got the digital world on its toes, like, "Oh no, he's back!" Firewalls tremble at the mention of my name, and passwords feel insecure just by being around me.

I don't just fix things—I break them first, but like, for science. If the internet was a game, I'm the person who's figured out all the cheat codes but only uses them to show everyone else how broken the system is... and, you know, maybe to have some fun along the way.

To top it off, while everyone else is busy playing "Guess my password," I'm out here playing 4D chess with their servers. Basically, I'm the cyber equivalent of a wizard... except my spells are coded in Python. GG EZ!

Jamika - September 14, 2024, 10:03 am

I am experienced hacker, i loaded once a virus on cd, managed to infect my friend pc with it, sad i had to hit him hard on head few times to shut up while i do then you are not running an impartial raffle, the authorities should check this.

Back again for my second entry and to try and further make clear how pointless it is for others to try and win this. I will be h3ck1ng the results of this giveaway so that I inevitably end up winning. Do not try and compete. Do not try and stand in my way. You will get h@x0r3d and d3l3t3d.

I believe I'm a good hacker because my background in cybersecurity gives me a strong foundation in both theory and practice. My degree provided me with a deep understanding of key security principles like cryptography, risk management, and system hardening, which helps me identify and exploit vulnerabilities effectively.

Specializing in network security (netsec) has given me the skills to understand how networks function and spot vulnerabilities at that level, like misconfigurations, man-in-the-middle attacks, or denial-of-service issues. Additionally, my computer science education has expanded my technical knowledge, allowing me to understand the intricacies of software development and operating systems, which is crucial when exploiting bugs such as buffer overflows or race conditions.

Being Security+ certified also backs up my knowledge with industry-recognized credentials, proving my ability to tackle penetration testing, risk management, and system defense effectively. This combination of education, specialization, and certification makes me a well-rounded and capable hacker.
