PS: made this as my first post cuz IG ppl on sites like these are mostly cool and don't gate keep Hey man, and welcome to HF! Glad to have you here. Before you get started here on HF, make sure you read the Help Docs, they'll provide some valuable information about the forum.

As regards to any tips, just follow the rules, don't piss off staff and post in the correct sections. There's quite a few megathreads about various topics, ranging from crypters to botnets. Additionally, when dealing, make sure to always use the contracts system (and of course a middle-man like Cooligan). Keep all discussions on-site for your protection when dealing likewise.

Anyways, welcome to the forums, and I hope you'll be able to contribute to the forums ?

Sup dude,

There's a lot of helpful resources at your disposal on HF.

You'll come to learn the search function on site is incredibly useful, and will be your go-to when looking for content on specific topics.

Another member on HF has laid out an incredibly comprehensive beginners guide to the site that I highly recommend you check out.

Link here —> <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6234577>

P.S. I found this thread using the search function by typing in "new user"

Also, as you explore each of HF's sub forums, you'll see stickied posts in some of them. Oftentimes, but not always, you'll find helpful threads that were pinned in some sections, designed for easy access to new members.

Remember though, people can pay fees to sticky their own threads to some of these sub forums. So not all threads are stickied to be helpful, but many are.

If you have specific areas of interest where you have more questions, feel free to post in the appropriate areas and more members the of the community I'm sure would be more than willing to help.

And the user above rightly pointed out to check out the Help Docs. Think of that page as your HF Bible. Most if not all questions you may have will likely have an answer within the Help Docs.

Good luck

1. Stick to the white hat so you don't wind up in jail.
2. Avoid anybody giving you a get rich quick scheme.
3. Understand the social etiquette.
4. Study. Study. Study. You're here to learn.

See ya around my dude.

Welcome to HF dude.

The whole site has knowledge and resources regarding all things hacking. If something is missing. You make a post for it. The community is very helpful. Just be sure to follow the rules and guidelines.

Hope you enjoy your stay here.
