Thread: What movie are you excited for?

Charlie Sheen - October 1, 2024, 1:01 pm

We have quite a few good movies coming out soon.

I'm excited for Terrifier 3, Gladiator 2, and the new Venom movie. Also Smile 2 is coming out soon, that one was so much better than I anticipated.

What movie(s) are you excited to see?

peldon - October 1, 2024, 1:41 pm

Ballerina, 28 years later, Avatar 3

28 years later is a movie I've looked forward to for so many years. I was surprised they didn't do 28 months later. Since the first 2 were days and weeks.

Totally agree with you, 28 months would have been a great idea !

And it would've opened the door for a 4th film.

The first 2 were so good. I skipped the television show after watching the trailer though.

I didn't even know there was a television show about it lol. But yeah, waiting too long for this damn movie.

Yeah they released it on Disney+ a year or so ago. It tanked. The movies though were so good. They definitely had me thinking too far into the free masons and illuminati and hidden messages on the dollar bill lol.

Even to this current day, there's hidden images on these bills. It's honestly quite wild to notice. It's of course for 9/11.

I'm always thinking about the scene where he puts the document in the stove for heat and it reveals a clue.

Yeah, the Declaration of Independence, but had to use a hair dryer with lemon juice.

Terrifier 3 seems to be the hot topic. I, myself am excited for the movie but, other than the practical effects, I don't think the Terrifier movies are that great though. I think "Art" is scary an antagonist but, typically, the story lines aren't that great with those movies.

It's just a fun movie to me. They don't make a lot of horror movies anymore, and I like that Art started as a side character in another film over a decade ago, and they had almost no budget for these films and now here it is coming out in theaters and thousands or millions of people are excited to see it.

I've actually never seen "All Hallows Eve" and I really should. Didn't that start out as a short film or something as well? It's also fun to see something new that isn't Jason, Michael, etc. I respect the Terrifier series but, I just wish there was more to the story line.

Yeah, and yeah the storylines are little lacking. I think they are going for that 80's B movie vibe when they make these films.

I will definitely watch these: Gladiator 2, Mufasa, Sonic 3.

I hadn't heard about Mufasa, I had to google it just now. I'm surprised they didn't animate it.

The emotional depth and the impressive animation will surely provide an unforgettable experience. I also admire the moving narratives that often take center stage in films featuring animals, conveying important values such as responsibility and care. I can hardly wait!

I never saw the "live action" lion king, was it any good?

Actually, I didn't have the time or opportunity to watch it. I definitely have to catch up. Thanks for the reminder! ?

I'm a shithead so none really. I'm tired of the same reboots, the same marvel movies (I don't really care about superhero movies at all). I want unique, new ideas. A24 has been on top of it in my opinion.

I just went ahead and Googled "upcoming movies" every single movie is:

- A) Reboot
- B) A movie form of an existing product (Minecraft: The Movie!!!!)
- C) Continuation of some series I really don't care about (Marvel)

What about M Night Shyamalan's movies? I probably murdered the spelling of his name. He usually is pretty out there. I liked his newest film Trap.

His movies are pretty hit or miss in my opinion. Trap wasn't bad, pretty decent, but he's not a director I look forward to new films from necessarily.

You are right, his movies are hit or miss. He's been doing better, Split and Glass were great. Knock at the cabin was nuts.
