Thread: Pillow Case Candy Bag For Trick-Or-Treating.. Who Else Did This?

DemonAsylum - October 1, 2024, 1:34 pm

Please tell me I'm not the only one that many years when trick-or-treating went around using a pillow case as a candy bag ??

Oh, every single year.

We already had them on hand and got way more candy than a bucket.

We definitely switched to the pillow case around 8 years old. Fit so much candy in there.

Fish - October 1, 2024, 1:38 pm

I started off with a regular basket or something along the traditional halloween candy bags. But my last memory of trick or treating was with a pillow case! Needed something bigger and stronger.

SuseGD - October 1, 2024, 3:09 pm

The first few times I went trick-or-treating I just used one of those regular plastic bags. Turns out, those aren't very strong or stable, so I switched to using a pillowcase. I remember being so surprised as to how much more candy I got one year, all because of the extra space in the pillowcase.

There is just something about having a pillow case filled to the brim with candy being held over your shoulder ?

Speaking of which, surely you encountered some houses where people just let the bowl at. Did you ever take more than you should? ?

Oh dude all the fucking time man. I mean; what else do you expect out of a fat kid and an unsecured full bowl of sugary death? He's going to take all of it. Don't get me wrong, I understand it wasn't the right thing to do and most of the time I would give most if not all of my candy away to other kids that walked by me and stuff. But there were some years where I kept that shit for myself. It is a mystery as to what happened to those candies in my stomach lmfao

LMAO. Yeah I always wondered what went through their heads. Like they were gone and so it was either leave candy out and hope for the best or put nothing out. I guess it's either you be hopeful that kids are fair or for the most part anyway so the candy stretches out between as many as possible or you're cynical about what kids would do and so don't bother putting anything out.

Kids are kids man, we're gonna do it just because we fucking can do it haha. Now, if my mom was with me when we went to those houses she was a stickler, hated it haha. It's no fair playing by the damn rules MOM

For sure. Kids are kids and it really is that simple. You can't put forth a situation like that and not have it go wrong to some degree LOL. And oh yeah? Mom woulda beat that ass or what ?

Bro she would have knocked my teeth out and smacked my ass into the next halloween!! I swear to god man.

Jinu - October 2, 2024, 9:14 am

Definitely not the only one! Pillowcases were like the ultimate candy bags --sturdy and could hold way more loot than those tiny plastic pumpkins.

See, I WANT to say that I got huge hauls of candy on Halloween and maybe I did honestly, but what we thinks as kids back then is a huge haul of candy is likely quite different than what we'd see such as now lol. If nothing else, I felt a got a lot back then and was very grateful for it. Sorry to hear about your situation back then, but I'm glad you got to enjoy whatever amount of Halloween, trick-or-treating, and candy from it that you did ?
