Thread: Your Favorite Birthday Party Place?

oRequiem - October 2, 2024, 2:39 pm

When you had Birthday Parties when you were younger (or even now)
What was your favorite place to have a birthday party?

For me, it's definitely Dave & Busters.

I haven't been there since I was very young, but it's just amazing.

I never seriously played pool. I did at my uncle's house a few years ago since he has a pool table.

My memory, it was alright.
Not the best but not the worst, just decent enough.

I haven't spent a dime on it thankfully lol.
It was just a family fun thing for me and my cousins.

Never yeah, idk why. I think there was a time where I was about to have a party but I lost interest ect

Interesting. Usually parents would surprise their kids instead of asking if you want a party. Maybe that's just a thing where I'm at.

That is typically true, but not really the case here. My family arent really into celebelerity stuff.

Nothing wrong with that, it's nice at least you had a party. Seems like a decent amount of people never had parties.

At a young age everyone should have a party , as getting older it gets boring

I'm 27, I can't remember the last time I had a party. I think around age 16 or 17? Probably 16.

Seems to be the case or around the age range on when parties stop. Some people still do some parties though.

I think ill do again in some part of my life just not the next 5 years i think ?

Jake Johnson - October 21, 2024, 1:55 pm

I think I had a birthday party at chuck e cheese once when I was younger. That was really the only arcade type place for kids in our area as I was growing up. Now we do have a dave & busters which would be perfect for a birthday. Nowadays my birthdays usually involve going out to eat with family or going out to local bars to drink for free with friends.

Pimping - October 21, 2024, 3:11 pm

Definitely chuck e cheese or some arcade when i was a kid also maybe a movie theater party was the best parties

DanielZ - October 21, 2024, 3:54 pm

home, somewhere quite

2xTheTap115 - October 22, 2024, 11:16 pm

In the days of school, most often such events were organized in the open air, on scenic glades or in the woods (in summer), in winter things got a bit complicated and there was no alternative left but to party at home.

sharn - October 23, 2024, 3:25 am

I remember celebrating my birthday at a bowling alley a few times.
The combination of food, fun, and friendly competition made it special.

Jinu - October 23, 2024, 3:35 am

I totally get that! Dave & Busters is such a fun place for a birthday party with all the games and great food. For me, I always loved having birthday parties at amusement parks. The thrill of the rides and the excitement in the air made it feel extra special.

Chrome - October 23, 2024, 3:54 am

I just like to do small birthday things, maybe head to the pub.
