Thread: What Really Drives You Crazy?

Yin Yang - October 6, 2024, 6:04 pm

I have to vent about a couple of things that really get under my skin:

First off, I can't stand people who chew loudly, like a cow. it's like they have no awareness of their surroundings! Just a few bites hearing it can ruin my entire meal and appetite.

And then there's the issue of slow drivers. When I'm trying to get somewhere, it feels like I'm stuck behind a wall of molasses. It's frustrating and can turn a quick trip into an eternity.

What about you? What little annoyances drive you over the edge?

I'd have to agree, the lip smacking drives me absolutely wild. I also tend to get some bad road rage here and there as well.

Injustice

People from "minorities" complaining all day-long how the country they live in is racist, and the leftist who support them because they're in need of attention

Great points and I agree. I'll add on ignorant individuals that speak with emotions rather than facts. Timewasters.

Self righteous people that want to get on their high horse about absolute trivia, or about how they think you don't work hard because you work in a different way from them.

The mind manipulation that works so well

Many people are brainwashed so much by tv ,news ,media etc and if you try to tell them they call you crazy

I absolutely hate loud chewers. When I hear the excessive lip smacking it just makes me cringe.
