Yeah, I know what you mean. Even we weren't sure if it was possible. Almost all of my friends rent and may never get into the property market. Especially with how infation has boomed in the past few years. I admit that if we didn't buy when we did we 100% could not buy anything decent in todays market so we are quite lucky.

It's great because it unlocks another level of weath and opportunity for us. We can invest the equity that builds on the property to purchase more property or make some investments that we wouldn't be able to do if we didn't own this house.

My advice is to anyone thinking about when to buy, just get in ASAP because it will only get harder.

Thought I would throw some bragging rights out there for me. I like to have a good flex every now and then.

My wife and I built our first home together back in 2020. I have put some pics below, let me know what you think. Paid $568,000 for it and it's now valued at $940,000. It is a 4 bedroom, 2 bathroom, 2 garage home with two living area and a butlers pantry.

Congratulation on the house, the inside of it looks great. New homes always have that "look" to them, I'm pretty sure once you moved in furniture and got settled in, the whole AI look went away.

I have a mortgage on the property but we put down about 100k cash for a deposit. My wife and I work. Really don't bring in that much money, maybe 150k per year combined.
