Thread: What is your work schedule?

jcole - October 8, 2024, 12:29 pm

What is your work schedule like? Do you work in the mornings or in the evening? I usually work about twelve hours a day from the morning to night. I tend to clock in at 6AM and then clock out and go home around 6PM with no lunch. For the past few months I was doing 15 hour days and that was hard on my body. I work M-F, and occasionally the weekend. I don't like working the weekend, but will if I need to get the extra hours in. What's your work schedule like?

Yin Yang - October 8, 2024, 12:32 pm

The good ole 9-5 for me my dude

Mxstermind - October 8, 2024, 12:56 pm

As soon as I wake up, go outside, grab a coffee and start with phone then 2 hours switch to my laptop for another 2 hours. Chill for 2 hours then work for another 2 hours.

Radi - October 8, 2024, 1:41 pm

I hate to admit it but its the standard 9-5 and is this getting tiresome doing it day in and day out. I am trying to switch it up but seems to be impossible at current time.

You're not wrong that is a fact. It's just that people when I was younger they painted this completely different now, you live to work and not the opposite work to live which should be the standard. I just wish there was more things rather than being treated as just a number in a company.

Eran - October 8, 2024, 1:55 pm

Either 7-3 or 1-9. Sucks :(

The Pact - October 8, 2024, 1:59 pm

I only "work" 7 hours a week in the afternoons and evenings only except on Sunday when I have to start work at 11am which I don't like. Mostly I don't have to work more than that. I have passive income from older stuff that is still selling online and my house is more than 90% paid off so I don't have to pay much on it per week and I am on track to have paid off my house in four years.

Chrome - October 8, 2024, 4:11 pm

At the moment I am unemployed. When I start my new job in a couple weeks I will be 9-5 5 days a week. Sunday-Thursday.

Epic - October 8, 2024, 6:16 pm

I'm pretty much the standard weekdays with a 9-5. Pretty consistent schedule, doesn't change very much. Sometimes I can work weekends for a little extra.

Fish - October 8, 2024, 6:27 pm

Right now it's nothing as I have a nasty cold. Sleeping my day away... I think my grind for the octoberfest award got me sick

codeine. - October 8, 2024, 6:31 pm luckily im my own boss since i have a few dispensaries but i do work freelance prog jobs on the side but i still kinda stick to 7-9/9-9 to keep good habits

Cap - October 8, 2024, 7:14 pm

I'm usually M-F, 7:30 to 4 but usually go beyond that. Then I'm also on call one night per week and one weekend per month.

Signed off early today since I took a short lunch. The dream job 40 hour work week.

If only it worked that way, brother. If only. I'd do the same thing as well ?

I'll end up doing that when the heat dies down a little bit. My area is getting micro managed heavily and we are being monitored. ?

That's a great idea. I wish I was able to do that. But I do sometimes get long breaks in between orders and get to chill and relax for a hour or two sometimes ?

I work for other people only seven hours a week. Anything else is for myself yeah, but to be honest I mostly don't work because I don't really need to. My mortgage in US dollars is only $95.04 a week. And at that rate I'm on track to have it paid off in six years.

DashPHP - October 9, 2024, 12:00 am

I opted for the entrepreneur life and that quite frankly consists of working non stop. Sounds silly but that's the life rn.

As soon as I'm awake I'm working. Coding, dealing with the business stuff, always working!

And I go bed when I'm absolutely exhausted, which happens to be anywhere from 12-18 hours later.

Rinse and repeat until rich! Haha diablospartan - October 9, 2024, 12:43 am

Well i have also a real job and i work in my free time

I dont have a schedule and i try to work as much as i can ,it doesnt matter if its morning or afternoon

Boil - October 9, 2024, 1:13 am

As a college student taking 20 credits and working 20 hour weeks my schedule changes. Typically class Tues/Thurs makes it so I can't work more than 3h, so I just don't work. Wed/Fri classes make me work 2pm-9pm on campus doing different tasks. Sat/Sun it looks like I'll be working 8am-1pm from now on..

Pimping - October 9, 2024, 3:47 am

I am currently out of work now and have been for 3 months but when i was working i worked the night shift and it was fun but weird. My sleep schedule got affected by it and sometimes I wake up in the nights now and unable to sleep lol

I guess my mind thinks im supposed to still be working at that time or something

Jinu - October 9, 2024, 3:59 am

That's a pretty intense schedule. Twelve hours a day with no lunch break must be tough, especially after doing 15-hour days. It sounds like you're really dedicated to your work. My schedule is a bit more flexible. I can start early or late depending on the day, and I try to find a good balance. I also prefer avoiding weekends for work unless something urgent comes up. How do you manage to stay energized through such long days? Do you have any tips for keeping up stamina?

Sahgid - October 10, 2024, 6:11 am

My schedule. I work weekends, T-S usually get out at 6 but this week is different. There's 12 hours in each shift.

Jake Johnson - October 19, 2024, 4:25 pm

Right now when it comes to my design work I am freelance so I work whenever I have client orders. Now this is only when I am at my computer. If someone contacts me for an order and I am not at my computer in the evening I probably will not respond until the next morning when I get online to start my day.

Right now I would say I get online to start working around 9 or 10am and can be online until 10pm or later but usually won't do any new work after 8pm.

Once I graduate next spring I plan on getting a internship or full-time job in the design industry. My dream job would be doing graphic design for our local professional football team. Which that one I think can have some varying hours as you need to be on hand for game days and those are always different.

F4tDoinkz - October 19, 2024, 4:30 pm

M-F 8-4:30 is my official schedule. Most of the time it ends up being 8-8 or 8-9:30. I work some pretty crazy hours sometimes.
