Thread: Trump secretly sent covid tests to Putin during shortage, phone calls since 2021

Kaleb - October 8, 2024, 3:50 pm

Bob Woodward alleges in his new book "War" that Trump sent COVID tests, along with machinery to Putin in secrecy, with Putin requesting such as "I don't want you to tell anybody because people will get mad at you, not me."

In addition, the book alleges Trump has had at least 7 phone calls with Putin since 2021/leaving office.

I am interested in what MAGA people think of this, left-leaning folks too, chime in! I'm gonna hold some cards up my sleeve and see if any of you get a bit reactionary as you often do ?

Jamika - October 9, 2024, 3:05 am

Sorry for my bad but why? So russian can make covid tests? Need more explanation please Massive respect for Bob Woodward and he got Trump to be more honest with him than anyone. Actually Bob Woodward revealed the fact that Trump was way more intelligent in 2020 than he pretended to be to the public, but that made Trump look bad to me because Trump showed that he actually understood all about Covid, but on the TV he was acting the fool, and pretending not to understand things he actually did. I guess someone pointed out that it's the "I love the poorly educated" thing because he thought he could appeal to more people by playing dumb, but it just wasn't the time to do that.

As far as the Russian thing Bob Woodward wouldn't say stuff he didn't have proof of.

The Kremlin has denied the phone calls, but the secret COVID testing machines claim checks out.

I believe it was a very small amount particularly for Putin. Regardless of whatever Putin said to the public he was absolutely terrified of getting the virus himself. I haven't read the book though, that's pure conjecture. This was not when covid tests were readily available and being mailed to people by the UPS for free. This was when getting a COVID test was near impossible for a normal citizen, if not pretty much impossible, Trump was still president, we're talking mid/half end 2020.

Remember the interview between Putin and Trump and he said he don't see any reason why it would be Russia in regards to interfering in the election.

[Video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wBwgxHnlhgo>]

Then after the backlash occurred he backtracked and said he misspoke and said he meant to say "wouldn't".

Anyways this doesn't surprise me, during a time when Americans are suffering and dying and shortages why wouldn't Trump help Putin?.

Foxy Proxies Ltd - October 9, 2024, 8:06 pm

I really don't see a problem with the covid tests. It shows, that despite politics, in matters of life and death all governments can cooperate for the life and safety of the planet as a whole. As for Trump staying in contact, well that's a matter of politics and business. Never forget, a politician is a businessman first and foremost.

Well Russia isn't really viewed as an ally of the US by... really anyone, you know, if you know history. So it is a bit weird Trump would be giving any amount of aid to them unless we had a surplus, which we did not, we had a shortage.

As long as you maintain that position with the Biden family and Ukraine I guess you're fair to say that in terms of "politics and business". Seems pretty stupid in my opinion though.

Most things in politics are always stupid. But you have to be pretty low down and dirty not to share the little you have during a global pandemic. Keep in mind foreigners who were not vaccinated can always come to your country too and continue infecting the population. So I really don't see a downside or playing favorites here either. Politics aside, its just good business to quell as much of a pandemic as possible.

The tests were not for Russia. They were for /Putin/. Russia is not an ally of the US, as a result neither is Putin. IDK where I'm losing ya here.

They were not given to him so Russia could develop a vaccine, testing kits, or do research, they were given to Putin because Putin was terrified of the virus despite any public claims he made otherwise.

Should Trump have flown to North Korea and given Kim Jong himself, the individual, for his own individual use, supplies too?

Yes we must believe Elon Musk, and you know what we must also vote for Trump because Nicky

Jam is so hot like she is the hottest around and she went to Trump's rally. ?

[Video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jZ18VOeYYtA>]

On a real note I have watched many debates with Trump supporters and they all fail to answer basic questions, they all fail to name actual policy. Also discussions I have had on these forums prove the same thing about his supporters.

Voting for Trump is voting for massive inflation due to his tariff proposals, it is voting for a dictatorship, it is voting for rights of women being stripped away, it is voting for a climate disaster. I don't even need to say more you know these things, hell Trump supporters know these things they just choose to vote for candidate that will have a disastrous outcome for this country and the world.

I love how Trump kinda stumbles and doesn't mention he made an electric car company because his base probably isn't super huge on that ?. The saddest thing is I really don't think Elon cares that much, I think he wants people to like him, he's already got money, success, could probably land any number of beautiful women but I think he just wants people to see him and be like wow that's a cool guy and he just Streishands himself.

Leaning into the right is an easy way to get a decent chunk of people to "like" you though. Until he gets casted aside or does one thing that even slightly negs or upsets Trump, at which point he'll be public enemy #1 Imfao.

I'm just patiently waiting the election at this point, sadly I'm honestly not as certain as I was a few months ago that Kamala will win, people are really just bought into Trump it seems. I don't know why, or how, when there's just so much evidence of him being an awful person, an awful leader, awful at getting anything done, outright breaking the law, but, alas that's where we're at.

At the moment I say Kamala easily wins the popular vote but Trump has a pretty good chance of winning the real deal.

I also just can't get over how beautiful it is that Elon claims he bought Twitter because it was some leftist biased platform and now he took the company private and is literally giving SPEECHES at the GOP's selected candidate's rallies... christ almighty lol

If Trump wins all we can hope for is that he puts his ego aside and actually listens to experts when it comes to climate, economy, healthcare, etc. I still think Kamala will win though but everyone thought Hillary was going to win too and we know how that ended up.

I will say I do like Trump's stance change on Marijuana.

If Trump wins I hope he is successful at pushing this country forward, I do not want any President to fail.

I think it will be difficult for Trump to put his ego aside because that's the very basis of his type of firebrand politics. However, I don't think enough of the population thinks Kamala has what it takes to be president.

Trump thinks she has what it takes and I will explain why.

Trump said 15 years ago San Francisco was a great city the best in the country. 15 years ago Kamala was the district attorney and Gavin Newsom was mayor.

But we know Trump doesn't have what it takes after all he wants to run the country like a business, but over a dozen of his businesses failed and he has had multiple bankruptcy filings, he doesn't have any real policy, he failed to do what he promised during his first 4 years.

Yea that is the likely outcome, it is most likely an attempt to lure in people who smoke.

But if he does get elected and he is serious about it then I will say without hesitation he did a good thing if he gets it done.

We are seeing bills being introduced from both Republicans and Democrats to remove it as a controlled substance and decriminalize it so hopefully that is a sign that its coming.

Both valid points but I don't think Trump lost the second term because his base felt he didn't achieve anything or didn't hold true to his word. Quite the opposite, they seem convinced he achieved a lot when he really didn't get much policy passed at all.

I'm also not sure how many presidents have had assassination attempts as a result of policy they enacted or things they did while they were president, after the fact (or to speak more clearly, I don't know how many people who weren't currently presiding, have had assassination attempts). I think it might actually only be Trump? And to be fair he's running again so these assassination attempts appear to be more so to prevent him from having a chance at being a president again, not holding him accountable for policy or promises he made in the past.

There wasn't any assassination attempts, at least that we're aware of, that occurred after Trump left office and Biden/Harris were in, and before he began running again.

Now they say a 3rd assassination attempt against Trump. But I don't believe people needed to go to these extremes over Trump. His policies are not that bad to warrant attempts on his life like this. But it will play to his fan base and will boost his poll numbers I think.

Heard about that, agreed, I don't condone political violence at all. I do wonder how much of it is the news magnifying it. I'm not trying to downplay it at all, I am just curious.

It would really surprise me to find there wasn't a large number of assassination attempts on Obama, just most didn't get far, and weren't publicly mentioned / covered.

You'll notice how the news will zone in something when its hot. For example, if there's a big school shooting any mass shooting, even if its in some hood in the middle of the country and is gang violence will be BREAKING NEWS. I'm curious if its that or people really are just fucking losing it.

The media plays a huge part of sensationalism. They will print anything if they think they will sell more papers, etc... The media is more about the highest bidder and money rather than reporting real unbiased news. As we also know, many intelligence agencies have these same huge named media corporations on the pay roll as well.

I really didn't want to believe that, but the first one definitely seemed staged.. the blood didn't look real, the whole standing up and pumping his fist in the air after being shot in the head/ear just didn't seem realistic to me. No he predicted Trump's win in 2016. Now he's predicting Kamala's win in 2024 because of the Keys system.

The Democrats are down in the "mandate" key, because they lost the House in the 2022 elections; in the "incumbency" key, because Joe Biden is no longer the candidate; and in the "charisma" key, because it's too early to determine whether Harris is charismatic, Lichtman told the Miami Herald . When asked if Trump would win the "charisma" key, Lichtman said, "He doesn't fit the definition of the (charisma) key. The keys require that you be broadly appealing. You can't just appeal to a narrow base like Trump."

The Democrat Party have the upper hand this year because there has been no recession in the election year, the third-party campaign has fizzled and Republicans have been unsuccessful in putting up a scandal against the Democrats.

They win the long-term economic key, because real per capita growth under this term has vastly exceeded the average of the previous two terms. They win the policy change key, because policies under Biden are fundamentally different from those under Trump. They win the social unrest key, because the earlier sporadic demonstrations have fizzled away. They win the scandal key. Republicans have been trying for four years to pit a scandal on Biden/Harris and have come up empty,

"They win the foreign policy success key, because this government put together the coalition of the West that stopped Putin from conquering Ukraine, as many predicted, and moving on to threatening America's Nato allies and undermining America's national security. They win the challenger charisma key, because whatever you may think of Trump as a showman, he doesn't fit the definition of the key, which is a once-in-a-generation, across-the-board, inspirational candidate. He only appeals to a narrow base. In four years as president, his approval rating was just 41 per cent, right at the bottom, historically, of presidents. And in two consecutive elections, he lost the vote of the people by a combined 10 million votes. So that's why there are nine keys in favour of the Democrats," Allan Lichtman further said. The Democrats lose four keys to Trump

And in two consecutive elections, he lost the vote of the people by a combined 10 million votes. So that's why there are nine keys in favour of the Democrats," Allan Lichtman further said. The Democrats lose four keys to Trump

While all of what you said may be true, they also predicted Hillary Clinton would stomp Trump on voting day. And that didn't happen. But all those folks who disagree with Biden's policies regarding wokism, critical race theory, all the LGBTQ++++ stuff, diversity in hiring instead of the right man/woman for the job, sending hundreds of billions of dollars to Ukraine and neglecting U.S. citizens and territories, putting the world on the brink of nuclear war, and all the other bullshit Biden has done in the past 3 and a half years I don't think will win it for the democrats. Polls now show Trump leads Harris in all swing states (article I read just this morning).

No he did not. That's the point. The Keys system I'm talking about predicted that Trump would win in 2016 and correctly predicted the result of the last ten elections, unless you count when the Supreme Court took Al Gore's win away. An Al Gore win has been his only "mistake" since 1984. And above is his prediction re Harris vs Trump.

Hmm, with Trump now leading in all swing states I can't really see a Harris win this year. Unless the electorate college does not vote the way of the constituency.
