Thread: New Group Concept

Chrome - October 8, 2024, 11:48 pm

So once someone sells their group to me I think I am going to run a group with two subforums. One is going to be a gaming group. The other is going to be a public engaging group focussed on the personal life sectors.

The gaming group will hold tournaments publicly for people to compete in. There will be prize money and membership slots involved. This will give the gaming section a bit of a boost and add a bit of community spirit to the forum. This is the only way people will gain access to the gaming group.

The second section is going to be based on supporting individuals in the personal life sub forums and boosting moral in the community. This will include hosting threads for people to reply to regarding certain social issues and give people a place to discuss their struggles. It will be similar to my old subforum called Wallflowers.

I know the gaming group will be the most popular and busiest SF but the Wallflowers will be equally as important.

Let me know what everyone thinks. This isn't locked in but it's the direction where I am heading. It would be good to get everyone's thoughts.

A dedicated gaming group we haven't had in a while. Would be nice.

I've been spamming Group Battles, host it.

A gaming group would be nice. I currently help run and was apart of various gaming website over the last decade and a half, as well as game modding websites. A gaming group would be something cool to see again. Would of been my idea if I could have ever afforded a group.

It does seem we are going to take this direction. I'll work with the current members and come up with something exciting.

Gaming group for sure would be class. Skill was the last I remember and that was enjoyable.

I was looking to buy a group to make it for gaming but related to web3 (BIGTIME, OFF THE GRID, Illivium (big fail), Chrono Forge, Seraph, and many other games) I've been full time researching new games, learning about their economies and making money with nft or currencies of the game and their markets)

As I said elsewhere too, under 'personal life' there could be a 'relationship advice' thread too. I know, there's a sub reddit with that already but that's a reddit, not HF, not the same in any way.

Gaming section with more active members is a nice thing, that's something that I have been looking for ever since TF2 died.

In personal life there is innuendo which is the same thing.
