Thread: Favorite Altcoins

Aeowulf - October 11, 2024, 9:35 am

Does anyone have favorite Altcoins? Obviously not BTC, but I'm also talking separate from the other mainstream stuff like ETH and LTC.

I'm just looking for other coins to get into. Legitimate, but under the radar altcoins that are great for transactions.

.Infinity. - October 11, 2024, 9:43 am

Not really under the radar, but Floki. I mentioned it on another thread here yesterday.

The strongest positioned meme coin with by far the most utility. Look into what they've actually built since the 2022 bear market and you will be impressed.

I predict the upcoming catalysts will be their flagship Valhalla game launch in November + marketing initiatives around it, which will cause a temporary rally back to ATH prices (2.5x from here).

Then most likely a bleed off capitulation period until the market itself turns to new highs, at which point I think Floki will set record highs matching previous market caps of coins like Shib and Doge from the last cycle.

I used to hold a bunch of Floki but I swapped it all. Never had anyone wanting to transact with it. ? I'm pretty sure I swapped when it was near a low too.

So I would've said Sui but it's not under the radar.

Not sure if you're heard about Fideum: <https://www.fideum.com/> not even $30 mil Marketcap, #3283

Brief details:

? What is Fideum? Fideum is transforming the DeFi landscape with a secure and user-friendly platform for digital asset transactions.

? MICA Regulation Fideum is leading the way in regulatory compliance, aligning with the EU's Markets in Crypto-Assets (MICA) framework. This ensures a safe and transparent environment for users, fostering trust in the DeFi ecosystem.

? Mastercard Lighthouse Winner Fideum's innovative approach has earned it recognition as a winner in the Mastercard Lighthouse program, highlighting its potential to drive financial inclusion and innovation in the crypto space.

Toncoin. It's relatively new and picking up price steadily because of the meme token boom going on with Telegram groups.

BGB is another one. It's a CEX token of BitGet. Naturally if Bitget exchange continue to get volume and more users. BGB token will rise like Binance's BNB has.

Oh, haven't you heard? I'm a (not really) TON millionaire:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6278296>

That was legitimately the first I had heard of TON. ?

Haven't heard of those others. Thanks.

Yeah... ? It's killing me. Just let me use it or make it go away.

I would choose my personal favorite - Monero. Monero remains strong even after a lot of exchanges delisted. It has a very strong privacy foundation.

I'm holding a whopping $17 of it. ?

F4tDoinkz - October 12, 2024, 6:20 pm

Not really too much of a fan of alt coins these days. But when doge went up for a bit I bought in and dumped just in time and I made a bunch off it.

Shortly after a ton of shit pump and dump coins started and I managed to make a bunch off them before they offloaded and took basically everyone's money. Had some fun with the market for a bit.

Since you already stated LTC. I'll have to go on a limb and point out Tron. I really consider my own personal business experience with crypto as a deciding factor on what's currently being used in the Marketplace. Of course I get the BTC and LTC the most. And XMR represents a portion. But I often get direct contacts from new members wishing to pay with USDT and guess what network they use? TRON! Almost every time. I'd say 90% of the time when I don't have a listed crypto (BTC/LTC/DOGE/XMR) someone wants to pay, they go USDT (TRC-20) tokens.

That tells me something. There is a market utility and adoption for Tron.

I could probably deep-dive for a couple hours to prove my experience as fact but let's just start with this as my viewpoint.

I will go out on a limb to say that the only reason people use Tron for payments is because it's 10x cheaper to withdraw/send from CEX.

There is literally nothing else remarkable or unique about the Tron ecosystem other than using it to transact is cheap.

Source: I use it when it's an option because it's cheap.

I've noticed the same thing recently. had quite a few people paying for things with TRON. Probably on to something.

yes sui, it really a new diamond

I retract all negative statements that I have made about the Tron network in perpetuity.

Long live Justin Tron, the Prime Minister of Liberland.

I think XMR and SOL are my favorite

Technically you didn't make any negative statements. You said it was used because it was cheap fees. That's absolutely not negative.

I think though you discount how popular TRON is in ASIA.

AI response about volume comparison of TRX, ETH, and SOL. SOL kicking butt on raw daily transactions but again, I don't have the experience of people trying to pay with me SOL very often.

Quote:Comparing the daily transaction volumes of Tron (TRX), Ethereum (ETH), and Solana (SOL), we observe significant differences in scale and transaction speed:

1. Tron (TRX) stands out with over 4 million daily transactions. This volume is largely driven by its significant use of USDT stablecoins on the TRON network, which accounts for a substantial portion of its activity.

2. Solana (SOL) processes around 40-50 million transactions per day, surpassing both Tron and Ethereum in sheer transaction volume. This high throughput is due to Solana's design, which can handle thousands of transactions per second (TPS) efficiently.

3. Ethereum (ETH), while extremely popular for decentralized applications and smart contracts, has a lower daily transaction volume at approximately 1 million transactions. This is mainly because Ethereum's network, despite recent upgrades like Ethereum 2.0, is still more expensive and slower than Solana or Tron due to its higher gas fees.

In summary, Solana handles the highest number of daily transactions, followed by Tron, with Ethereum trailing behind, albeit with a stronger presence in DeFi and smart contract applications.

And I asked AI about where Tron's volume is mostly.

Quote:TRON (TRX) has a significant portion of its transaction volume concentrated in Asia, with China being a major contributor. This is largely due to TRON's founder, Justin Sun, being from China and his strategic focus on promoting the platform in the region. TRON's adoption is also growing in other parts of Southeast Asia, including countries like South Korea and Singapore, where cryptocurrency adoption is high, especially for blockchain-based applications like gaming and decentralized finance (DeFi).

In addition to Asia, TRON has also seen growth in transaction volume across Europe and Latin America, particularly due to the widespread use of USDT stablecoins on its network. TRON's low fees and fast transactions make it popular for cross-border payments, especially in regions where traditional banking systems are less efficient.

However, China remains the most prominent country in terms of TRON's overall transaction volume.

China BTW is 18% of the world population.

Nit0 - October 16, 2024, 4:01 pm

XMR would be a good one boost - October 16, 2024, 7:13 pm

probably SOL cuz thats where all the fun is atm (degens and memecoins).
