Thread: What is on your Bucket List?

Jinu - October 12, 2024, 9:16 am

Hello everyone, We all have dreams and experiences we hope to accomplish in our lifetime. Whether it's traveling to a specific destination, trying a thrilling activity, or achieving a personal goal, bucket lists can be a fun way to reflect on what truly matters to us.

For me, I've always wanted to visit Japan and experience its rich culture, history, and of course, the delicious food! It's been a dream of mine for a long time, and I hope to make it happen soon.

Now, I'd love to hear from you!

What's one or two items on your bucket list?

Is there a particular reason why these experiences are important to you?

Have you checked anything off your bucket list already? Share your stories!

Let's inspire each other and maybe even get some ideas for our own lists!

I always wanted to try skydiving, and I am planning to take the leap next year.

The excitement and the views while freefalling have always caught my interest, and I cannot wait to experience it.

Yin Yang - October 12, 2024, 10:11 am

Visiting more countries would be one of them

The excitement and the views while freefalling have always caught my interest, and I cannot wait to experience it. Skydiving sounds like such an adrenaline rush! The idea of freefalling and seeing the world from that high up is both thrilling and terrifying. Hope you have an amazing time next year. Definitely something for the bucket list.

- 1) Get a big time off
- 2) Start researching on my master asap
- 3) Start searching a remote only job and getting to exit
- 4) Buy a motorbike and a licence

I wanna try sky diving at least once in my life tbh

Eran - October 14, 2024, 10:44 am

Visit lots of EDM music festivals, on top of my list it has to be Tomorrowland in Belgium and EDC in Las Vegas. Lots and lots of others so I'll spare you the details. It's the only place where I feel truly happy.

These two would be sick! Festivals are amazing, always such a free environment. I would love to go to one in another country that isn't my own, just haven't had the chance yet.

Those are some solid goals! Taking time off to recharge and focus on your master's sounds like a great plan. Plus, finding a remote job can really change your lifestyle. And buying a motorbike? That sounds like an exciting adventure! Do you have a specific bike in mind?

EDM festivals like Tomorrowland and EDC are legendary! The energy and atmosphere must be incredible. It's great that you've found a place where you feel truly happy. Do you have a favorite artist or set that you're hoping to see live?

I watch a lot of videos on YouTube of just the culture in Japan as I find it very interesting. The food there does look extremely good! I've seen some pretty crazy vending machines they have too which would be fun to try.

Yess the vending machines look nuts ?

I recently watched a Japanese game show/reality show and the culture is pretty fascinating honestly. I hope to experience it one day.

Japan is such a unique place with its mix of modern and traditional culture. Tokyo's fast-paced vibe and futuristic architecture must be fascinating, while Kyoto offers serene temples and historic charm.

Spending a couple of weeks there will give you enough time to truly immerse yourself in Japan's culture, food, and sights. You'll be able to experience both the bustling energy of Tokyo and the tranquil beauty of Kyoto's temples and gardens.

my only concerns are 1. the language, as far I know they don't speak English, it will be a problem with communication, and 2. locals, some people say they might be racist to the rest nationalities

The language barrier can be a concern when traveling to Japan, as English proficiency is not widespread, especially in rural areas. However, many places in major cities like Tokyo and Kyoto have English signage, and younger people or staff at tourist attractions often know some English. Using translation apps like Google Translate can be incredibly helpful, too. Plus, learning a few basic phrases in Japanese can go a long way!

As for concerns about racism, experiences can vary. Some travelers report feeling warmly welcomed, while others feel there's a certain degree of social distance or curiosity toward foreigners, especially outside of urban areas. Japan generally places a strong emphasis on politeness and hospitality, so while the culture may be different, outright hostility is rare. It's also worth reading up on social customs to ensure you understand the etiquette, which can help make interactions smoother.

Overall, with some preparation and an open mind, any potential challenges can be managed.

I'm not entirely sure which specific e-sim is the best for Japan, but in general, I heard, providers like Airalo, Ubigi, MobiMatter, and Holafly are pretty reliable. They offer eSims that you can set up before you even arrive, which is great for having internet right from the moment you land.

Well.

1) I would like to stay in Kings Chamber in the Great Pyramid all night on the day of the equinox with my best friend or girlfriend (sadly she doesn't like those things and is afraid of psychedelics and darkness in closed spaces heh) and do some mushrooms. It would be very intriguing experience that I really want to fulfill.

2) Make a proper trip to Ayahuasca with legitimate guidance from a real Shaman.

I kind of like to experience things outside the five senses. These two would make me really happy and fulfilled human being

No but my best mate is a brit so when that time comes I will ask him on where the best place is to be and do my own homework. I want to wait until my kids are at an age where they will actually enjoy it though. So maybe in about 10 or so years we will do this trip.
