Thread: Are you staying in bitcoin or pulling out?

Chrome - October 16, 2024, 1:40 am

Looks like BTC is about to hit peak territory soon as It has passed 100k AUD. I think the highest it's been is 106k. Are you staying in or pulling out in preparation for a potential drop/crash?

I have personally moved my money out into a cash account for now.

abdelx95 - October 16, 2024, 2:04 am

why do you think it gonna drop?
based on what?

History, it goes up and down in waves. each time gradually higher but it wont just keep going up again like it did years ago.

I'll still be holding mine. I don't wanna regret in the future.

Bastille - October 16, 2024, 2:35 am

I still hold since 2021 when I bought when everything was high ?

I'm waiting 2025 / 2026

Koyote - October 16, 2024, 2:50 am

I'll likely still keep holding for quite a while yet. With the tax situations the way they are here, and the upcoming rate hike, I'm going to wait until I'm positioned where I want to be before dropping any.

How good is hindsight....

Pimping - October 16, 2024, 3:29 am

I have less than $1.5k in btc so im staying since its definitely gonna keep moving up this year also no point in selling now not any good investments other than btc/cryptos right now

I always pull out brother... Oh wait this is a BTC thread. Nevermind.. hahah

No but, I usually set a automatic sell a couple of times a week.

So if the value is 1BTC= 650 I set automated sell at 620 or something, then if it goes to 700 I change the auto sell to 670 and so forth.. Then when the drop comes I just watch my BTC get sold and wait for the drop to stop. While also setting automated buy in..

So if the drop is still going on and it goes down to 500 I set automated buy in at 570, then maybe it drops to 450 I set for 500 and so forth..

I feel this has been proven quite reliable all in all. I always have a bit of a span because there will always be flux in the rise and drop, so I do a gap as to not sell or buy to soon.

Omniscient - October 16, 2024, 1:02 pm

Holding strong till BTC hits $300k then I'll sell 25% of my holdings.

LSD - October 16, 2024, 3:29 pm

holding strong. never go 100% out if I sell at all

Eran - October 16, 2024, 5:14 pm

I am definitely staying for several more months, not dipping now lol.

Lyralei - October 16, 2024, 5:35 pm

I don't care anymore and am just holding. If I sell now, I'll have PTSD again if it goes up and although I might lose a bit of money, if BTC really goes down the ship, I don't really mind sinking if everyone else sinks. It's an adventure at this point.

Dibs the door, you can stay in the water.

Not against selling, and to be honest I would have done the same but it's nearly 10 years at this point. From my experience it's better to just leave and focus on something else than pro-active in crypto then having to accidentally trip face flat first. But if it's a job, interest or hobby then that's fine.

I just don't think it's so easy to predict unless you spend time looking at graphs all day.

jaytench - October 17, 2024, 1:35 am

I have no consideration of even selling any portion of BTC until at the very least $100k. And even then it would only be small amount.

Skidsuper - October 17, 2024, 1:42 am

Sold mine when it was low. Now bought again after it's picking up momentum. ??? Don't be me. Why does Bogdanoff hate me.

Mewtwo - October 17, 2024, 3:04 am

It really kind of depends the outcome of the US elections. I honestly don't think crypto is going to do well if Harris is elected. Wouldn't be surprised if she imposes more stricter policies and bans, that'll slam bitcoin back to the 30's

Aeowulf - October 17, 2024, 5:09 am

I was an idiot and already sold off all my BTC. Wish I had more!

Nit0 - October 17, 2024, 7:06 am

If I had $ to invest I'd be dollar cost averaging in

It really doesn't matter who wins the election though.

BTC will operate with or without Trump, remember 2020/21 when Biden won? Will price go higher sooner with Trump? Yes. But it really doesn't matter as the four year cycle plays out whoever the president is.

How do you ban Bitcoin?

I consider BTC my retirement fund. I'll keep stacking and don't plan on selling for another 30+ years.

And that's how it's done. Stack and hold. You don't build wealthy constantly moving your assets around.

Damn, how much do you put into it every month? year? on average...also do you use cold wallets or what?

Not sure what you're saying here? Are you saying I was wrong about it hitting peak territory or that we are dumb for holding?

I've played the game of moving assets around over the years and very rarely came out on top. Buy BTC, Hold and STFU actually ended up being some of the best crypto advice I ever received so thank you for that!

No set amount, it varies depending on month to month expenses.

Cold wallet only. Having a relatively large amount of crypto on any exchange is asking for trouble. I'm sure you've heard the saying "not your keys, not your coins".

Edit: I do use exchanges from time to time but never keep more than a few hundred in them.

Secrets - February 13, 2025, 6:25 pm currently sitting at ~15k in BTC but I want to dump another few thousand. Crypto is till fairly new even if it's been around 10+ years.

Braco22 - February 14, 2025, 12:33 am

I started slowly accumulating BTC with whatever I have left of my income, this is my second portfolio named Retirement. SMIRK

GruntStyl - February 14, 2025, 6:28 am

Got rid of a lot of BTC back in 2016-2017. Learned my lesson. I will never sell off all my BTC ever again. Maybe small amounts here and there until more global adoption takes place, then I can just use BTC as payment everywhere. But I will always keep the majority of it.

raceconditioned - February 14, 2025, 8:04 am

Same here, for any alt as well as BTC. I sold a shit ton of ETH when it was at $20 to buy a laptop, big regret. Now I am riding nearly 7 figs in ETH/BTC and as long as I don't need the money for life expenses and investments, I let it chill there, definitely not risking potential copium on missing out on millions of profits in future, just slow a bit here and there to get on.

Blockonome - February 14, 2025, 10:19 am

Staying in Bitcoin for sure, I believe the only way is up in the long term future.

jaytench - February 15, 2025, 1:41 pm

Stay in Bitcoin, sell the rest.

Simple and to the point. I agree. This is where I've ultimately landed after many years of dabbling around in crypto. Are there other use cases for other coins besides BTC? Of course. But as far as investing in a coin, just stick with BTC and don't panic sell. It will continue to go up but will have its massive dips as well.

He's holding 10 years and that's the whole point. Just Buy Bitcoin and hold it for 10 years and it's a huge multiple even from here at $100k. BTC in 10 years absolutely will be $1m+. So if you can start stacking now even $25k worth, that's gonna be a $250k nest egg. Keep waiting another decade and likely be $1m+.

Bitcoin is the only crypto I am positive is going to continue to have long-term value in the market. I don't believe ETH has it, even if it's still around, definitely not LTC, just not sexy, and it's a gamble on which Smart Contract chain is gonna moon and take the majority of the market.

In the end, 90% of any portfolio should be Bitcoin. That's my stance on it. Everyone has their own strategy but there is nobody who has BTC from 10 years ago that wishes they sold it for ETH or any other crypto of that era. And there was lots of them too, same as now. All those promises are nearly worthless.

Same exact situation here. I ended up selling at around $12k in 2017, I think, right before it took off. Bought back in 2022 at around $22k. I will always be holding some sort of Bitcoin.
