Thread: Most hated seasonal tradition

Whoever decided I needed pumpkin spice in everything needs to be beaten with a peppermint stick (the same flavor that's going to be found on everything in a month).

I love a lot about the seasons, but man I hate some of the aromatic and food choices around this time a year. What's HF's least favorite part about the holidays?

I do it for my family here. The food and people being a little nicer during the holidays is always a plus.

When I was a teenager fireworks made me anxious, and they were always around my birthday. But now they don't bother me, except this boyfriend I have goes psycho about how he hates all the people setting them off because they scare his dog. lol

I agree with ya here. The pumpkin/peppermint flavors are just a little too overwhelming for me, especially when they are flavored so artificially like most treats today. Maybe I'm just being a grinch though ?

You're not alone. I'm cool with things having peppermint or pumpkin spice on it. I hate that it's now a peppermint or pumpkin flavor 1st, and then the drink or food flavor comes second. To me these are almost like secondary, or enhancing flavors and simply not meant to be used as a primary flavor.
