Thread: Writers Block?

Do you ever experience insane writers block even though you know what you are wanting to write about? I am right now for a large project that I am working on. What are some methods and tactics you do when writing (whether it be research papers or just text messages) to combat writers block?

I remember back in college we would have topics or specific things to write papers on. I'd sit there for hours trying to come up with ideas. Basically all I did was think of the overall picture I want to portray and just go with the flow.

Try taking a small pause and get some fresh air, find some new resources or ask AI to help a little bit for extra creativity.

I write any word that comes to my mind on my word document, then I develop the one that sounds easier to me, sometimes it helps me to put 2 words in the same sentence, and step by step I build a text.

I can definitely relate to that. Writer's block can be so frustrating, especially when you know what you want to say. When I'm stuck, I often try freewriting. Just writing whatever comes to mind for a set amount of time without worrying about grammar or structure. It helps to clear my head and can lead to some new ideas. Another tactic is to change my environment. Sometimes a different setting can spark creativity. I also find taking breaks and coming back to the project with fresh eyes can make a huge difference.

I find it helps to change my environment.

Sometimes moving to a different room or switching up my workspace breaks the block.

I get writers block when I am trying to construct a sentence lol. Maybe old age kicks in a bit.

Taking a step back and just walking in nature helped.

Thanks everyone. <3
