What addiction would you eliminate from the planet if you could?

I have seen a family member go through alcoholism so I would have to say that because it does a lot of damage.

Chrome - October 22, 2024, 8:00 am

Hmmm I should say drinking and gambling but I enjoy both lol. I would say Meth.

Gem - October 22, 2024, 8:01 am

Porn addiction. It's definitely one of the hard ones.

I do enjoy drinking as well but I do it in moderation especially since I have seen the damage too much drinking can cause.

I'm pretty active in the NoFap reddit and the amount of people this impacts is unreal. Unfortunately, the internet provides easy access for us to discover porn at young ages and develop an addiction to it without even realizing it until years later.

Yeah my dad is a current alcoholic, I know the damage for sure.

Probably drinking/alcohol. It's so easily accessible and can be insanely destructive.

account_ - October 22, 2024, 8:15 am heroin, scourge of society

It truly is very destructive! I live in a place where drinking culture is heavily promoted too

Yea I kind of live in a similar place as well. I used to party a lot on the weekends when I was younger, drinking and stuff, but I rarely drink heavily these days. It's so toxic to your body, not to mention people getting in fights, drunk driving, etc..

I dont live in the states either. Here in Australia we hear more about ice addiction than heroin.

That might be to do with is meth is easier to get, make, than heroin in Australia.

I guess, the flow on effect would be that its probably cut more with other shit and sold cheaper. Who knows, I dont dabble in it.

Good to know, one of the toughest border controls in the world, also one off the most expensive countries to buy drugs.

I think they are equally terrible addictions. Here in the US the issue is the drugs being cut with fentanyl and it is killing so many people.

Porn addiction. Drug and alcohol addiction has barrier of entry at least, but everyone can get their hands on porn. I've seen kids around 12-14 watching porn in public. Even I first found about it when I was 11, it's so easy access. Another reason it's worse IMO is cause people don't take it seriously. You'll even find people encouraging porn and masturbation like it's nothing, especially on Reddit and Discord.

I totally agree. I am very involved and vocal on Reddit speaking out against porn addiction and trying to help others struggling with it. I know how hard it is as I fight this demon myself. I discovered it when I was probably 11 or 12 and didn't realize I had a problem until high school and I still haven't beaten it but have come a significant way since then. People on Reddit and Discord are all about "gooning" which is an ick to me. They justify it by whatever means they can. I have no problem if an adult truly wants to watch porn on their own will. However, when kids get addicted at a young age it really fucks up their brain. My dopamine receptors are so fried it is unreal. Trying to do a brain reset.

Alcoholism and fentanyl and on occasion some more heroin and instantly the world becomes a more beautiful place ?

UltraexTrader - October 22, 2024, 1:18 pm

I wouldn't go wrong if I could eliminate either of these

- Alcohol
- Gambling
- Drugs
- Smoking

I probably wouldn't eliminate it out of all the other addictions as it is one of the safer addictions compared to others.

DanielZ - October 22, 2024, 6:07 pm gambling, one of the worst addictions for mental health.

sharn - October 23, 2024, 5:03 am

If I could eliminate any addiction from the planet, it would be drug addiction.

It causes so much harm to individuals.

Removing it would save countless lives.
