

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: I got a job offer from defense contractor

ughhmmmm - October 31, 2024, 2:17 pm

It's not the company I tried hacking in previous thread. I got an interim TS (Top Secret) clearance. Can't say much or I can be identified over time. I'm so excited. I know people who were in this company, so I have a general idea of what I'll most likely do. There's so much opportunity for me. I'll mostly likely not flip burgers, cashier, and pick up trash the rest of my life.

I'll just be normal for some months and not try to look like an insider threat. I first need to get a lay of the land and heavily look into the general atmosphere and security measures. I'll think about selling some information and leaking some. I've already have a list of foreign intel agencies and some aces up my sleeve to get some crypto.

To be honest, if I get a full-time job I wont do any of this, at least most likely. I'm slowly being afraid of risk.

I've reworked my OPSEC. If my VPN fails, they'll either get a residential proxy or random wifi network I've hacked. You can always use a yagi antenna to boost wifi range for a couple miles minimum. I always spoof my MAC There's many ways to hide beyond a VPN and full disk encryption.

Game - October 31, 2024, 2:41 pm

You're just trying to have a free tour of Guantanamo Bay aren't you? Lmao.

I'll ask again about that therapy... any thoughts on it?